TRAIN TOLL 70

DACCA (AP) — An express passenger train packed with men, women and children ran off the tracks in western Bangladesh today, killing at least 70 persons and injuring 182 in the country's worst train crash, officials reported.

The officials said by telephone from Chuadanga, 160 kilometres west of here near the border with India, that four persons were still trapped in crumpled train ears hours after the accident.

Gold Rush In Charlottes After $2B Potential Find

CLASSIC COSTUME in Thunderbird and Eagle motif produced some fascinated faces in Grade 4 class Thursday at George Jay elementary. Inside costume was Calvin Hunt, of famed Indian family, who took four months to create costume. Youngsters, who are studying North West Coast Indians, were entranced by close-up of colorful garb which Hunt designed for Germany's Hamburg Museum.

A strike with a potential gross of $2 billion has triggered a modern-day gold rush in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The find by a Nanaimo logger who prospects part-time, is rated by a mining company president Ken Sanders as one of the most fantastic discoveries in Canadian history.

Sanders said Thursday his company, Consolidated Cinola Mines Ltd. (NPL) has a purchase option at the site discovered about eight years ago by Efrem Specogna, of Nanaimo.

Sanders said preliminary drilling revealed a low grade ore in a huge deposit. But last year researchers sank a diamond drill shaft that indicated a rich mother-lode was hidden in the area as well.

"All of a sudden last fall we hit fantastic high grade ore deposits. We were getting one ounce per ton for 80 feet in this drill hole. It was ten times as high as the grades we had been getting, and you can believe it was a tremendous thrill to hit that."

Gold is selling for over $230 an ounce.

"I fall trees during the week and look on weekends," Specogna said in an interview from Kokish, an isolated logging camp on northern Vancouver Island.

"I worked up there (in the Charlottes) for two or three years and I used to prospect with my brother-in-law. We find many things up there but this was the best of all.

"We looked for years for molybdenum deposits and when we finally found it they made a park there."

Specogna said that over the years a lot of companies have expressed interest in his Juskatla Inlet claim.

"But they never came through."

Asked if he is happy to have finally hit it lucky, Specogna replied: "Well I have a contract (with Consolidated), but I don't know. It's human; I guess you always hope for more."

Sanders said Consolidated has already paid Specogna $60,000 for a test development on the site, and will purchase the claim from him in April for $390,000.

"I think he's been paid about $150,000 for options by other major companies since he staked the initial block of claims," said Sanders.

"He's the best prospector in B.C. as far as I'm concerned," he added.

Sanders says that once word of the find got out prospectors from far and near started to flock to the Charlottes and Consolidated's stock soared.

"We have placed $1 million in the treasury through stock market action since last fall. Now we're going full speed ahead and we're putting $400,000 into the property immediately.

"We're continuing exploration and going for bigger things. It's pretty close to being a cinch for a mine."

He said Consolidated is planning an open pit operation — which would be a first for gold mining in B.C. — that could see 100 million tons of ore extracted.

"We're looking at a potential of $2 billion gross. This site has fantastic potential. It's darn good grade for open pit mining and there are no mines in Canada or the U.S. that have this potential."

The claim site covers 2,500 acres.

Sanders said that when word of the rich drill hole finding filtered out, the Queen Charlotte Islands started to go a little gold crazy.

"Everyone was talking about it and when I was up there before New Year's all the accommodation was taken. The Island was full of people and there were people and helicopters going everywhere.

1978 Trade Surplus A Record at $3.5B

OTTAWA (CP) — A healthy increase in exports to the United States helped give Canada a record trade surplus in 1978 of $3.52 billion, Statistics Canada reported today.

The record high compares with a merchandise trade surplus of $2.92 billion in 1977 and $1.34 billion in 1976.

Statistics Canada reported on the basis of preliminary figures that exports totalled $52.3 billion in 1978 and imports totalled $48.8 billion.

The lower value of the Canadian dollar—which makes Canadian goods cheaper abroad—and the healthy U.S. economy helped push exports south of the border to $37 billion last year, up from $31 billion in 1977.

Exports to the U.S. accounted for 70.3 per cent of total sales abroad, up slightly from 69.9 per cent in 1977, Statistics Canada said.

Imports from the U.S. totalled $35 billion, up from $29.6 billion in 1977.

Japan was the next largest trading partner after the U.S., buying $3.05 billion in exports last year, up from $2.5 billion in 1977.

Britain bought $2 billion in goods last year, up only slightly from $1.95 billion in 1977.

Wheat exports in 1978 totalled $1.9 billion, up from $1.83 billion in 1977.

Exports of forest products showed healthy gains in 1978 over a year earlier. Wood and paper exports totalled $9.4 billion, up from $7.75 billion.

Iran Troops Open Fire

TEHRAN (AP) — Troops in Tehran and the western city of Sanandaj opened fire today on thousands of supporters of Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomeini angered by the government's delaying his return to Iran. There were reports of at least 14 dead and 55 wounded.

Khomeini aides at his exile headquarters in France said Iranian army troops joined in anti-government protests in the cities of Isfahan and Tabriz.

Residents of Tabriz said heavy shooting broke out in the downtown area of that northwestern city. Opposition sources claimed an undetermined number of people were killed in clashes in Tabriz between police and demonstrators.

The official Pars news agency said there also had been pro-government marches both in Tabriz and Zahedan in eastern Iran.

The state radio said nine persons were killed in Tehran violence and hospital sources said at least 30 others were wounded. Pars reported estimates that five persons were killed and 25 others wounded in Sanandaj.

Khomeini spokesman Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said in France that opposition reports from Iran indicated 15 persons had been killed and 1,000 arrested in today's "enormous demonstrations." But some of the Tehran demonstrators, their hands smeared with blood, told reporters that more than 30 were killed in the capital alone.

Ghotbzadeh said that according to his information soldiers joined in pro-Khomeini demonstrations in the southern city of Isfahan and took part in an anti-government hunger strike in the northeastern city of Mashhad.

The foes of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar armed themselves with wooden and metal staves and set fire to tires and garbage in the streets around Tehran University. Thick black smoke billowed over buildings in the heart of the city.

The crowd taunted the soldiers with shouts of "Death to Bakhtiar!"

No Protection Of Rights: PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the Task Force on Canadian Unity is "dead wrong" in thinking that provinces will protect minority language rights of their citizens.

"There's a basic disagreement," Trudeau said at a news conference. His government continued to feel that English-language rights in Quebec and French-language rights elsewhere had to be protected by constitutional guarantees.

In its final report, released Thursday, the unity commission said provinces should be free to determine the official language within their own borders. And they should given responsibility for protecting language rights for minority groups. (For provincial reaction to the report, see page 14.)

Trudeau described that position as naive, saying there has recently been an erosion of English-language rights in Quebec.

The prime minister said he envies the optimism shown by the eight-member unity commission.

But 120 years of history had shown that minority-language groups need more protection than that provided by provincial laws.

TAX-HIKE WARNING FOR U.K. STRIKERS

LONDON (AP) — Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey has warned strikers paralysing Britain that if their pay demands are met, not only will they face huge industrial layoffs, but he'll increase taxes in his next budget due in April.

He spoke in the House of Commons Thursday night as a crippling walkout by 58,000 truckers dragged on, 1.5 million public-service workers continued wildcat strikes and slowdowns, and 26,000 railway engineers staged the fourth in a series of one-day nationwide stoppages. All want pay increases of between 10 and 45 per cent.

The government, in its fight to bring down inflation in Britain, said last year that pay raises in 1979 should be limited voluntarily to five per cent. But unions that had accepted pay limitations for the last three years insisted on returning to "free collective bargaining."

Healey warned that if pay settlements exceed the government's five-per-cent guidelines, inflation would rise to 10 per cent in the summer and about 13 per cent by the end of the year. It now is about eight per cent. Such an increase, he said, "would put us back to where we were in 1976." When the government first suggested pay guidelines in 1975, the inflation rate was 25 per cent.

Britain's miners met Thursday with officials of the nationalized Coal Board, who said there was only enough money in the board's treasury for pay increases of between one and two per cent. The miners are asking for a 40-per-cent raise.

Hypnotist To Repay $125,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — A hypnotist who used her craft for unethical ends has been ordered by the British Columbia Supreme Court to return a total of $125,000 in property to a Vancouver Island man.

Albert Tannock, 66, said he was under the influence of Dorothy Bromley, of Nanaimo, from July, 1974 to January, 1977.

During that period, he said, he signed over deeds to his home in Parksville and gave the woman half-ownership in an $80,000 farm in Nanaimo.

He said the woman convinced him to give her a car worth about $4,500, a stereo and valuable coins.

Mair Demands New Change

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A lawyer for Environment Minister Rafe Mair has written B.C. Supreme Court chief Justice Allan McEachern in an effort to get Mair's name completely removed from a judgment which suggested Mair meddled in a rentalsman case.

Mr. Justice Richard Anderson Thursday amended his earlier ruling — in which he censured Mair for "unwarranted interference" in a landlord-tenant dispute — to say that he based his decision on hearsay evidence.

But that doesn't go far enough, says Mair.

"Unfortunately the amended reasons still contain the same rebuke that was there at the outset," Mair said today.

So his lawyer, J.J. Gow of Victoria, wrote Thursday to the chief justice asking him to bring Mair's concerns to the attention of Mr. Justice Anderson.

If a further amendment is refused, Mair admits he has no further recourse.

Mair said he is hopeful the judgment will be amended to indicate there were no facts before him to warrant any suggestion of any kind of wrongdoing on his part.

If Mair gets the amendment, he indicated he might not proceed with libel action against the Vancouver Express which printed a story based on Mr. Justice Anderson's original judgment.

In his written judgment Monday, Mr. Justice Anderson said evidence showed Mair had telephoned the rentalsman's office Oct. 20 last year after a column by Doug Collins in the Vancouver Sun criticized the rentalsman's handling of an appeal by a Vancouver woman against an order from the rentalsman to vacate her suite.

Mair has categorically denied he telephoned the rentalsman to interfere in the dispute.

Mr. Justice Anderson, in a two-page supplement to his original ruling, said Mair's denial must be accepted, agreeing the evidence on which he based his decision was hearsay.

In his letter to Chief Justice McEachern, Gow said the publicity "has resulted in grievous disparagement of our client's personal and political reputation and integrity of a most odious and calumnious kind."

Causeway Off Limits To Summer Hawkers

The Inner Harbor Causeway this summer will be cleared of hawkers selling foodstuffs and handicrafts, Victoria city council ruled Thursday night.

Aldermen approved a motion by Ald. Bill Tindall that will see the street vendors banned from the sidewalk but seven permits will be offered allowing sale of food on the old Black Ball ferry site.

Ald. Robin Blencoe, who voted against the move, said today he feels the city is dealing unfairly with the vendors.

He said Tindall made the motion because of pressure from the city's establishment.

"High pressure was brought to bear by people in the city who have clout," said Blencoe.

"There is an establishment in this city who will fight any change."

The vendors were permitted on an experimental basis last summer and Blencoe said there was opposition only because they were different.

He said complaints of littering problems along the Causeway weren't fair because the city was jammed with tourists all summer and there was litter everywhere.

"There was garbage down there (on the harbor), but let's not blame the people who sold this stuff — let's blame the people who bought it."

Blencoe urged council to retain the system now in place and work to improve it.

He said street vendors were mostly students and young people who had finally found a way to make a little bit of money.

"I think we're treating them very unfairly."

Although council voted to make the Causeway off-limits, Mayor Mike Young hinted that vendors might be allowed back on again in the future.

"I'm not sure we should eliminate hawkers from the city streets," said Young in supporting Tindall's motion. "I just think we botched it the first time.

"I would invite those with good causes to come forward."

Wharf St. Site Gets Rezoned

A key piece of waterfront property on Wharf Street moved a step nearer to development Thursday night when city council approved rezoning of the lot.

The property, at 1208 Wharf, is owned by Hans Hartwig's Diversified Holdings Ltd. The site lies between the Johnson St. bridge and Hartwig Court.

The developer is proposing an office-retail complex with a total floor space restricted to 90,000 square feet.

Despite the rezoning Hartwig still has some hurdles to jump. Council must yet approve the design details.

Ald. Murrary Glazier said he is opposed to the building plans put forward so far because there isn't enough open space.

But Ald. Bill McElroy said a lot of discussion has been held with Hartwig already and the developer isn't going to reduce the density of his project.

McElroy said council could have a lot of influence on how the building looks, but Hartwig isn't going to budge from his demand for 90,000 square feet of office space.

"If we don't like it the only alternative is to buy the property — and the appropriate body for that is the Capital Regional District."

BURNABY (CP) — A Mexican import store that never opened its front doors in six months, did enough business through the back door to prompt the laying of more than 100 charges related to possession of stolen property, RCMP said Thursday.

Inspector Les Holmes told a news conference that undercover police operated the store here in an attempt to infiltrate a provice-wide stolen property fencing racket. The store operators let it be known that they would handle stolen goods.

Sergeant Bill Howitt, who headed a similar operation in Surrey that resulted in the arrest of 45 people, operated the store here, which was called GYA Imports. The initials stood for: "Got you again," he said.

An RCMP spokesman said 56 people have been charged with offences, including breaking and entering, theft, possession of stolen property, fraud, possession of offensive weapons and drug possession. Twenty-four persons have been arrested.

Howitt said the front doors of the company, which began operation in June, were never opened, and aroused so much suspicion that some of the undercover officers were followed by other policemen.

Goods taken in included 26 motor homes, campers and late model automobiles, as well as cameras, tools and other easily-marketed property. More than 100 stolen credit cards were also recovered.

"When we set out last June, our goal was to recover $100,000 in stolen goods and arrest about 50 people," Howitt said. "Actually, we recovered $250,000 in goods and arrested or we're looking for 56 people."

He said the undercover agents never demanded that specific items be stolen because "our job is to reduce the number of thefts with these operations, and not to create additional problems."

Total payout to individuals who brought stolen goods to the warehouse was $22,000.

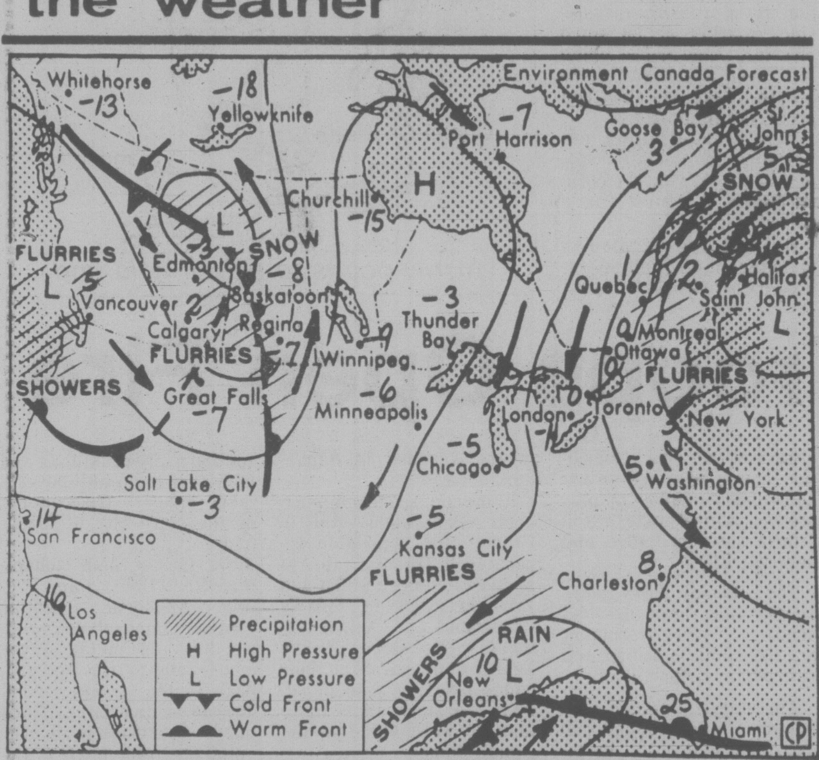

Map valid until midday Saturday

A Pacific disturbance off northern Vancouver Island this morning will continue southeastward through the province today. Satellite pictures indicate that the system is weakening but it is still expected to give some rain or wet snow to the south coast and snow flurries to the interior. A few showers will linger along the coast behind the disturbance tonight but a ridge of high pressure promises to bring sunshine to most areas of the province Saturday.

'Presence of the Lord' Seen by Pope In Slum

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — Pope John Paul mingled among the poor of a slum district in the Dominican capital today, then boarded a jetliner and flew to Mexico for a bishops' conference expected to focus on the Roman Catholic Church's role in helping the downtrodden of the world.

The Pope's visit to the populous slum of Los Minas (The Mines) in the western part of Santo Domingo was his last public act before ending a 23-hour visit to the Dominican Republic.

He took off aboard an Aeromexico jet for the flight to Mexico City, where he will inaugurate the Latin American bishops' conference, which will chart the course of the in the region for the next decade.

Mexico City was hit by two earthquakes early today, but there were no reports of casualties or serious damage and they were not expected to affect the pontiff's schedule.

The visit to Los Minas was an encounter the Pope had requested.

He told a gathering of Los Minas parishioners: "The Pope sees in you a live presence of the Lord who suffers in our deprived brothers, who still says blessed are the poor in spirit, those who are persecuted, who are pure, who work for peace, who are compassionate and maintain their hope in Christ the Savior."

Addressing himself to those in power, the Pope said: "In the name of these brothers, I ask those who are capable of doing it, to help them overcome their current situation so they, especially with a better education, may improve the minds and hearts and become authors of their own betterment and a more fruitful participation in society."

After celebrating a 6:30 a.m. mass in Santo Domingo's cathedral, the first built in the New World, the pontiff travelled by car to Los Minas, cheered by thousands of Dominicans who showered affection on him since his arrival Thursday.

During the mass, the pope addressed a large group of priests and nuns and urged them not to hide Christ under "sociological or political data."

"It happens sometimes that our faith weakens—and the people notice this right away and become saddened—because although we carry our faith inside, it is confused with our human tendencies and reasonings," he told them.

"Often we speak of Christ under assumed premises or sociological, political, psychological or linguistic data instead of deriving the basic criteria for our lives from a gospel lived with integrity and joy.

"Why is it that often our witness appears hollow? Because we present Jesus without all the seductive strength offered by his personality, without showing the richness of the sublime ideal of following him."

The question of the church's role in social issues will be one of the central topics of the Third Conference of Latin American Bishops, which the Pope will inaugurate in Puebla, Mexico.

The 58-year-old Polish pontiff endeared himself to the people of the Dominican Republic, an overwhelmingly Roman Catholic country, by kissing the ground when he arrived Thursday afternoon from Rome on his first visit to the hemisphere as Pope.

He later termed Latin America as "vital for the future of the Catholic Church." The region, "in the middle of difficulties and sacrifices, is witnessing for Christ and today wants to answer the challenge of the moment with a light of hope for the here and now and the hereafter," said the pontiff.

The high point of his activities Thursday was a public mass before 200,000 to 300,000 cheering Dominicans in Independence Plaza.

The pontiff reiterated his church's commitment to champion human rights, social justice and economic improvement for the poor throughout the world.

The church, he said, will work to see that there are "no children without sufficient nutrition, without education, no peasants without land to live on and develop with dignity, no workers mistreated, no system that allows the exploitation of man by man or by the state, no corruption, that there be no one who has too much while others lack everything through no fault of their own"

Refugees Loaded With Gold

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Six Vietnamese off the freighter Huey Fong, which landed 3,400 refugees from Vietnam here last week, were carrying gold leaf worth about $320,000, police said today.

Hong Kong police have detained the six for interrogation.

Police have also taken ashore the master of the Huey Fong and six of his Taiwanese crew for questioning.

The captain might have his ship seized and be sent to jail for four years if convicted under new laws against carrying unscheduled passengers into Hong Kong waters.

The rusty ship's human cargo was transferred to an old army camp turned transit centre last week after a four-week vigil outside Hong Kong harbor.

80% Autos Spew Filth

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday that about 80 per cent of U.S. cars manufactured since 1971 are illegally polluting the air.

Although automobile companies have been required to install auto emission controls for the last eight years, widespread maladjustment of engine settings, deliberate tampering and illegal use of leaded fuel have rendered them ineffective, the agency acknowledged.

The findings, contained in a General Accounting office report released by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, confirm what government officials have suspected for years — that without extensive post-assembly line supervision, regulation and inspection, auto emissions standards alone won't clean up the air.

According to the report, a quarter of the cars coming off assembly lines don't meet federal pollution standards, more than half exceed the limits within a year, and the failure rate increased with age.

The report recommends that annual inspection programs be set up in virtually all major U.S. cities — a requirement of the 1970 Clean Air Act that has yet to be implemented.

"The public has not generally accepted the need for I&M (inspection and maintenance) programs, primarily because car owners bear the cost to correct cars failing inspection," it noted.

Benjamin Jackson, head of EPA's auto enforcement program, said the agency "generally agrees with the report and we have programs in place to deal with the problems."

The GAO report charged that EPA's program to certify that cars meet pollution standards does not account for "real-world driving conditions" such as very hot or cold temperature, poor roads and deterioration of engine parts.

Canada Link To PLO Slaying

MONTREAL (CP) — External affairs officials are trying to determine whether a Canadian passport apparently used by one of the assassins of a Palestinian Liberation Organization leader was stolen.

Ali Hassan Salameh, Yasser Arafat's security chief, was killed with four bodyguards Monday when a car-bomb exploded in Beirut.

Palestinian investigators have charged that Israeli agents using British passports were responsible. They have also said one of the killers had claimed to be a Canadian citizen.

An external affairs spokesman said Thursday their investigation was sensitive because the PLO also had the name of the Canadian.

"You can imagine what kind of danger that person is in if he is innocent and the passport was stolen," Maurice Cutler said in a telephone interview from Ottawa.

"We have the name and passport number and all we can say for the moment is that the passport is valid.

"We are trying to determine now if that passport still is in the hands of the person it was issued to or if it was stolen. But we don't even know if that person is still in the country."

Salameh was reputed to be the mastermind of the 1972 Munich Olympics massacre of 11 Israeli athletes.

In Beirut Thursday, Palestinian investigators said they had made several arrests in the slaying, but refused to name those held or give further details.

A Solid, Sensible Report

When the task force on national unity was formed in the aftermath of alarm and indecision of the Parti Quebecois election victory in Quebec, it was hailed as a positive move by the federal government. The choice of respected former Ontario premier John Robarts, and Quebecers Solange Chaput-Rolland and Jean-Luc Pepin, among others, was a microcosm of the country itself.

But inevitably, as it picked up its responsibilities and began touring the country, the initial lustre tarnished. It was called a travelling circus, and a more than representative number of kooks and bigots came to its open public hearings, embarrassing the task force and belittling its lofty aims, making some Canadians wonder if the country could ever be held together in the face of such pigheadedness.

And as the initial panic over Quebec separating dissipated, to be replaced by a stoical acceptance of the uncertainty of the situation, the task force's work seemed less and less relevant.

But out of the spotlight after its hearings wound up, the task force quietly worked at its duties and eventually established a solid credibility. Out of all the controversy and even the disillusioning spectacle of some of its public activities has come a very good report on the future of the country. With the endorsement of its Liberal and Conservative co-chairmen (representing Quebec and Ontario), and its members from the regions of Canada, the report is probably the best consensus that could ever be put together on ways and means of preserving Canada.

At the heart of its recommendations is a recognition of Canada's "duality," the fact of French and English communities living side by side. "The first and foremost challenge facing the country is to create an environment in which duality might flourish; the second is to provide a fresher and fuller expression of the forces of regionalism in Canada's constitutional system and power structure."

Each of the two main communities of Canadians, "if ignored or left unsatisfied, has the power to break the country, and each must accept the other if a new period of harmony is to be achieved."

The task force wants English-Canadians to face the central fact of the whole crisis of Canadian unity — that Quebecers alone will decide what happens. "It is for the people of Quebec to declare themselves on their political and constitutional preferences, and not the country as a whole."

But, speaking to Quebecers, the task force notes that "sovereignty-association" between an independent Quebec and the rest of Canada "does not strike most Canadians outside of Quebec . . . as a particularly seductive invitation."

It sets itself the goal of reform that would accommodate "the often creative interplay between two linguistic and cultural orientations and among a diversity of regions and provinces."

It proposes a number of specific changes — adding two members to the supreme court, replacing the Senate with a Council of the Federation, increasing provincial powers in culture, immigration and so on — that are designed to prove to Quebec that a province can develop its own identity, yet remain part of Canada.

The specifics of the reforms are in themselves less important than the intelligent spirit of compromise and common sense which imbues the task force's report. If our political leaders can rise to the challenge of the 1980s with the same spirit, the country will survive.

Still Losing

Victoria Socred MLA Sam Bawlf released statistics this week purporting to show how well the Social Credit government has treated the city and people of Victoria since it came to office.

According to Bawlf's figures, the city and its taxpayers received $4.4 million more in provincial aid in 1978 than they did in 1975 — the last year of the NDP government. The difference came from increased homeowner grants, increased municipal revenue-sharing, and payment of full property taxes on government land.

No one is opposed to any of these increases, and they have been welcomed by all residents.

But Bawlf is not telling the whole story when he intimates that city residents are $4.4 million better off because of provincial policies. What he neglects to discuss are other provincial policies which have had the effect of significantly increasing the burden on city taxpayers.

Chief of these are changes in the school finance formula which throw an ever greater burden on the property taxpayer, regardless of increases in school district budgets. Victoria taxpayers in 1979 will have to pay about 15 mills more on their basic education property tax than they did in 1975. With each mill bringing in about $300,000 in revenue, that's $4.5 million in extra costs the province has imposed on Victorians right there. It more than erases the benefits the government has given to the city.

Also, in 1979-80, the municipalities will have to begin paying part of the cost of urban transit. The total bill for the Capital Region for the year is expected to be about $2 million; if the city of Victoria picks up the same share as it does of most regional expenditures, about 30 per cent, that's another $600,000 added to the city's tax burden.

No matter how you look at it, we're still losing.

Tories Need Media Savvy

OTTAWA — As a way of keeping a finger on the pulse of Liberals, I accepted last week an invitation to speak to a Toronto Liberal luncheon club. After lunch, I did my imitation of a prophet. (Sample: a Conservative minority victory in the election, but thereafter by no means necessarily a Conservative government). Then the Liberals had at me.

The questions covered this and that. Those that most interested me had to do with the press. Why were we out to get Pierre Elliot Trudeau? Why were we so soft on Joe Clark?

PET Had Good Press

These questions amazed me. The truth, I said, was that Trudeau has had the best press of any prime minister since the Second World War, and Joe Clark the worst of any opposition leader except John Diefenbaker, also a Conservative.

Since, if in a lions' den you might as well roar yourself, I added that Trudeau had done incomparably better despite the fact, and indeed because of the fact, that he has so consistently and so deliberately manipulated the media.

From the audience, there came back roars of anger. The byelection results have infected Liberals with a touch of paranoia about the press. As well, Liberals have a unique ability to elevate possession of power by themselves into a moral issue, a sort of litmus test of the patriotism, charity and wisdom of Canadian voters.

First the facts. In the 1968 election, we fawned on Trudeau. We were more critical in 1972, but Trudeau still had the edge because we didn't take the Conservatives seriously. In 1974, we cheered, as Margaret told us, "he taught me all about loving," and as Trudeau hopped on and off trains and hot air balloons. As the next election approaches, Trudeau's star is on the ascendant in the media firmament.

Clark, for his part, began as Joe Who?, became Joe What?, and then briefly was treated with benign neglect, from which he has benefitted. For the past fortnight, Clark has been trailed around the world by reporters seizing on his every gaffe and misstep in the international arena.

Conspiracy isn't the cause of this. It is circumstance. The media, "the goat" in Norman Mailer's epic phrase, have an insatiable appetite.

Trudeau and his advisers have long understood this. They understand that elections are decided, not on issues (wage and price controls, national unity) but on leadership (emotional, inspirational, anecdotal) which is exactly the material upon which the media feed most contentedly.

The Conservatives are too old-fashioned to understand the media. Poor Robert Stanfield made the fatal blunder during the 1974 campaign of actually answering questions put to him by reporters.

Reporters always dreaded the prospect of Stanfield in office because we knew he would be dull. (A squishy sentimentalism about Stanfield has developed, now that he has quit.) Similarly, reporters dread Clark as prime minister. Clark might be good or he might be bad, but unquestionably he would be dull. We, the press, thus would be forced to work five times as hard to dig up stories.

Blathering On

The current case in point is Trudeau's replacement of Dick O'Hagan as his communications adviser by Nova Scotia radio station owner Arnie Patterson. O'Hagan's a straight guy, who actually takes the press seriously as an institution. Patterson is enormously likable, funny, unpretentious, enthusiastic, gregarious. Patterson's job will be, says an insider: "To spend a great deal of time in press clubs across the country".

Will this work? Sure it will. While Clark blathers on about issues, Patterson will chat up journalists and Trudeau will chat up himself for the television cameras. And Toronto Liberals, in four months time, will be able to stop feeling paranoiac about the press.

Ask What You . . .

Any time a government (provincial, federal or municipal) offers what appears to be a small "break" to the citizens or to some particular group, the opposition, of all stripes and colors without exception, points an accusing finger and condemns the measure as a gimmick to get votes.

This tactic is rather offensive, for it implies the voters can be bribed for a few dollars. The opposition takes it for granted that citizens will support the party and the candidates on the basis of "what's in it for me."

This is not the case, and there are some historical instances to prove it. Sir Winston Churchill promised the British "blood, sweat and tears;" FDR told the Americans that a harsh road of sacrifice was ahead; JFK told the people: "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country." Of course, they were very inspirational leaders, eloquent and powerful enough to rally the nation behind them.

Man doesn't live on bread alone. Even in a materialistic society, man is capable of heroism and unselfish acts.

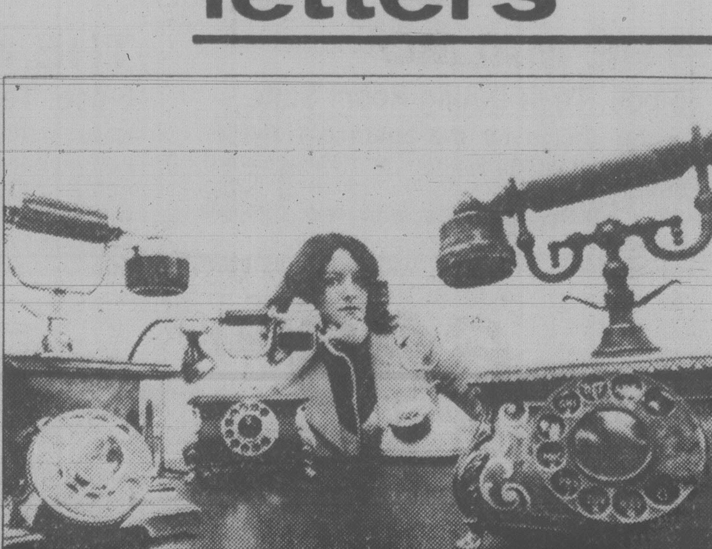
Many people do vote according to their conscience, their principles and their beliefs. They place the thought of what is best for the country above their own personal interest. True Canadians believe that faithfulness and loyalty to the country is far more important than loyalty to any political party. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Fresh Air

Congratulations to Carol Pickup for her rap on the knuckles to the GVLRA agent for his abrasive handling of the current CUPE negotiations. In the recent climate of union busting governments — both provincial and federal — she is a breath of fresh air.

It is beyond my comprehension how the present anti-unionism fostered by government, and at least parts of the media, can be considered a popular vote getter.

The great majority of working Canadians either belong to unions or similar organizations; or at least owe the working benefits they enjoy to the fact there are unions in existence. They would be very stupid indeed to vote for an anti-union government. — P.C. Malone, 923 Forshaw Road.



Telephone advertising pitches bother reader — she doesn't buy.

She Hangs Up

Yesterday evening, I was called away from the supper table to answer the telephone. It was a pitch for Maclean's magazine. This past week, I have been called out of the bath and out of a sick bed. They never got past the "Your number has been selected" part.

I won't have it. How is it that advertisers have the right to use a communications system that I have paid for to reach into my home to bother me? Have I no right to privacy as a "private" citizen? Does only business have "rights?" I am so furious that I am losing sleep over it.

If there is anything which may be said to characterize our society, it is stress. Inflation, unemployment, oil spills, crime, cancer, strikes, terrorism, Trudeau . . . how do you feel? And every time business intrudes its greasy tendrils through the keyhole, it is a wedge trying to split open my only refuge to let the whole mess in.

Advertising, especially that which reaches directly into the home must be regulated. The phrase "quality of life" falls very easily from the legislator's tongue but there seems to be very little understanding that quality of life has to do with such very real things as freedom of choice and the right to undisturbed solitude.

I do not want telephone advertising and I will never, on principle, buy anything which is so advertised. I urge everyone to do the same. And I call on legislators to consider legal restraints and curbs upon these unwanted, unsolicited and indefensible intrusions into my private life. — Judith Burkett, 42 San Jose Avenue.

Two Fine Men

The people of Greater Victoria have lost two fine men in the last two weeks.

Restoration architect Peter Cotton added flair and wit to our city. He saved and re-created some of our finest buildings, including both Emily Carr house and Government House. But apart from his profession, his personal work also added to the quality of human life in Victoria.

Peter served for years as president of Cool-Aid, and lent all the tact and talent of his personality. He resolved disputes, added imagination, and made us look more respectable than we ever really were.

□

Bill Scott, friend of outcasts and new thinking, has also passed away. Bill gave generously to hopeless causes, and gave his own drive and energy to us as well. He also served on the Cool-Aid board and provided learning and laughter and a remarkable insight into the Victoria we never knew.

Bill was a friend, a bright critic, a stern believer in moral truths, and in love with ideas. He had more friends and admirers than he may ever have known.

We've lost two great gentlemen, and were lucky to have had them with us for awhile. — Charles Barber, 74 San Jose Avenue.

Still Powerless

The proposed Socred handout of five $10 shares of the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. to each "citizen" is $50 more than the average Jane or Joe has ever received from CCF/NDP governments via nationalization.

The leader of the Tories calls it "Mickey Mouse," on a par with free school lunches and family allowances. Vic Stephens predicts that a million of the new "capitalists" will peddle their shares as soon as they get them. No doubt many will invest the proceeds on a few nights of pub crawling, (if not on the house mortgage or instalment payments) inadvertently proving that the majority possess little of substance except their marketable lives.

In the deadly process of keeping the propertiless people at arm's length from dangerous thoughts, B.C.'s "polarized" political parties become increasingly afflicted with foot-in-mouth disease. In the Times account of Jan. 12 (NDP Scoffs At Free Shares), the NDP's Charles Barber contradicts himself twice. He said the former NDP government's state businesses were "sound investments," then said the people owned all the shares. Before that he agreed with Gordon Gibson that the people now own the state-operated BCRIC ". . . because the citizens already own the resources." He then insisted that the corporation is not commonly owned because the Socred government is running it, though the state monopoly form has not changed one iota since the days of Barrett's bombast.

Real common ownership — democratic control — will involve moneyless free access to abundance by all according to need, with voluntary co-operation in production. Needless to say (with an NDPer as the new governor-general, figurehead of minority power and privilege to boot) neither Tweedledum nor Tweedledee advocates the practical alternative to majority powerlessness. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Avenue.

Biting the Hand

The following problem is evident and growing day by day in the municipality in which my company is situated, and in surrounding municipalities.

These municipalities are creating a complete economic unbalance by steadily increasing their taxes and reducing their demand for free enterprise services. The trend by these governments to purchase expensive, foreign-made equipment and employ highly-paid staff will eventually force small businesses out of existence. In effect, they are biting the hand that feeds them.

I will use figures from my company to illustrate this point. In 1973 our company paid $1,700 in property taxes, and received 35 per cent of our total income from services supplied to governments or contractors working on government projects. In 1978, however, our property taxes had increased to $3,500 while less than 10 per cent of our income was derived from government-related projects. This example is relative to all levels of government and is not limited to municipalities.

Small business is in the unfortunate position of paying increasing taxes to governments to allow them to purchase more equipment, and hire more employees and enables them to use our services on a diminishing scale.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm should do his part to direct municipalities to reduce expensive overhead and rely on the competitive spirit of free enterprise for equipment and services which are available for rent or hire. — GWG Rentals Ltd., Brentwood Bay.

Left's Not Right

The Times of Jan. 18, under the headline Concerned By Cartoon Verdict, quotes Ernie Knott as saying "that the decision comes at a time when there is a definite turn to the right." And what is so wrong — in the right? Mr. Knott is saying that "left" is right. The changing of words to make them mean what ever you want them to, is a favorite practice of the socialist. That's why they use the words "for the people" when speaking of the restoring natural resources, when they really mean "for the government." Or if they use the word "workers" that too means government ownership. When you elect an NDP socialist government, it will be made up of lawyers, union business agents, insurance agents and others, who if they don't own pricey real estate, shortly will have acquired substantial holdings, and not in the name of the "people" or the government but in their own name. That's right, Mr. Knott, not left. "All that glitters is not gold" and all that's left is not right. — John D. Tisdalle, Victoria.

It's Wesley, Please

In Ab Kent's interesting article (New Home Plus Live-In Music Monster; Times, Jan. 12) on a house containing an organ located in Cadboro Bay community, reference is made to the origin of the console — St. Andrew's-Wesleyan Church in Vancouver. The correct name is St. Andrew's-Wesley United Church.

A similar correction needs to be made in a reference to a Methodist church being built on the same intersection of Georgia and Burrard as Christ Church Cathedral. The name is Wesley, not Wesleyan. Many still living who belonged to it or recall it for some reason will sustain this correction. — Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

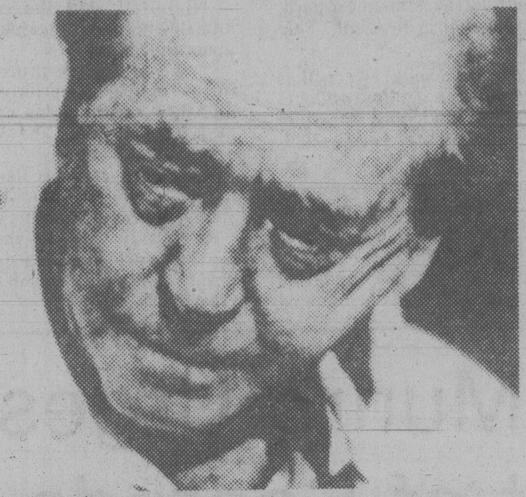
Yankee 'Me-First' Killing Proverbs?

By HENRY FAIRLIE
Washington Post



ORMANDY . . . 'archeologist' in adopted country

FRANKLIN

SHAKESPEARE
. . . proverbs galore

The other day I happened to hear on the radio one of the best descriptions of what it means to come as an outsider to America.

It was Eugene Ormandy who was speaking and, as an immigrant to the United States of now many decades, he said that he still remained an archeologist in it. It is a remark full of illumination.

One may go to France or Italy or Germany, and things they are simply French and Italian and German.

But in America the newcomer turns over every artifact, even the most commonplace, to find both a special American and more-than-American meaning in it. He applies his own carbon test to every pot and pan.

Tell me, he pleads to it, of this strange culture which made you. The Americanness of America, with all its roots and ties to the Old World, is still something that no one has been able to explain — its apartness from all else.

Take proverbs, for example. It was some months ago when, listening to a free-and-easy conversation one evening, I realized that we don't really have proverbs any more.

Someone may say, "More haste, less speed," but it is a cliche and with no real impact. A proverb had authority. It was advice, it was a warning. Not to exaggerate, in fact, it was a commandment.

In the intervening months, I have thought about the question a lot. I have waited to hear if proverbs are ever used in day-to-day life as more than cliches. The answer is, "No."

Immense

The literature about proverbs is immense. They have been such an important part of speech in the past that one wonders why and how we now think we can do without them. Here is something which is worth turning over in one's hands, and asking what is the culture that thinks it needs no proverbs. As I will argue, it is partly American.

Not long ago, two English authors, Ronald Ridout and Clifford Whitting, produced a book, English Proverbs Explained. They say in it that most authorities claim that there are now only between 500 and 600 proverbs which are currently used. But they raise the figure to 800.

I went through all of them and, although it may be true that, once in a blue moon, one may hear them in conversation, I would say that only about 50 are part of our daily use, and that even those are used, as I have said, more as cliches than as commandments.

What is a proverb? It is the commonly accepted wisdom of a people.

One definition is that it is "a popular short saying with words of advice or warning." Every term in that definition counts. It is popular: Everyone is agreed about it. It is short: Pithiness is its essence. And it firmly gives advice and warning. This last is essential. With its earthly widsom born of experience, the proverb says that, if you ignore its truth, you will foul up your life and have to pay the cost.

The proverb may just grow out of the day-to-day lives of ordinary people, or it may be a piece of wisdom which some writer distills into a phrase. "The course of true love never did run smooth" is something any peasant could tell you, but it was Shakespeare who distilled it into its final form.

Shakespeare is almost an encyclopedia of proverbs — "cowards die many times before their deaths" — and the great proverb-maker in America, of course, was Benjamin Franklin.

"Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." Thanks a lot, Ben, but you were a printer! What about the writer whose ideas come always when the sun is down? Anyhow, there is not much evidence, Mr. Franklin, that you kept very orderly hours yourself.

The next thing to notice about proverbs is that the most powerful of them come from rural societies. This should not surprise us. People who live by the soil and the seasons acquire a very earthy and patient wisdom. It nevertheless is important to realize how so many proverbs have their roots in country life:

"Make hay while the sun shines."

"All's grist that comes to the mill."

"The apples on the other side of the wall are sweeter."

Long, patient country wisdom.

As I was talking about this question to an American, he said, "I'll give you a proverb from the cities." He then handed me a pearl: "Don't play jacks on a hot sidewalk."

Volumes

That's a proverb! I immediately felt levels of meaning in it, applicable to all kinds of situations, and the more I thought about it, the more it speaks volumes in one phrase. Part of its force, like that of the proverbs of the country, comes from its down-to-earth local origins. When my friend used it, the streets of the Bronx came alive.

A saying is only a proverb if it contains some warning of punishment even by God, but punishment in the sense that one cannot get away with it, that a price has to be paid in one's own life.

But then the proverb, as one contemplates it even more, turns around with a fresh surprise. This is what is fascinating about the proverb, it is full of tease.

It is one of the most dramatically concentrated uses of human language, in all ages. The Oxford Dictionary of English Proverbs is not just, as one would expect, a work that carries scholarship to the heights of majesty. It is a book to read. Life is there on every page, puzzling away to find what is tangible in this otherwise shadowy world.

And where the proverb turns on its own tail to surprise us is when one contradicts the other. "Absence makes the heart grow fonder," says one proverb, and we nod because we know it is true. But at the next moment: "Out of sight, out of mind."

The proverb even seems to correct the proverb. "Experience is the mother of wisdom:" If anything is, that is a proverbial truth. But then again, "Experience is the teacher of fools." So it goes.

These contradictions are not mere accidents. The proverb is at the level where human behavior is shamelessly and even magnificently inconsistent.

"Sticks and stones may break your bones," says one proverb, "but words can never hurt you." Which is a blatant lie. And there is a proverb to say so: "Words cut deeper than swords."

Humanity

And right here is the wonder of the proverb:

You are human, it says to you. But what holds humanity together is the wisdom of your society, which has seen it all so often before, but which knows that in you it is still fresh. Just do not think that you can hack it alone, the proverb says, it is society that enables you to be the individual you are.

It is for this reason that I think that the decline of the proverb is partly an influence of America. The genius of America is to have erected the individual self and self alone. Without America there would have been no liberation movements.

But that genius has a deep geological fault. Everything in America, unless it is self-consciously confronted and resisted, tends to weaken the claims of society. The individual is propped up alone, but without the only reliable prop.

If you do not believe me, then look at the proverbs of Benjamin Franklin. They are adages to tell the individual how to get the best of his fellows. In other words, of his society.

Americans Taking Aim At Teenage Alcoholism

THE ECONOMIST

American states have some of the most restrictive drinking laws for adults in the world. Until last November, there was nowhere in North Carolina where a man or woman could order a gin and tonic. That has changed for those areas — such as Mecklenburg county — which have opted to alter the law.

People there, under local option, voted out the 70-year-old law, which had compelled them to bring their spirits to the dinner table in brown paper bags. But Oklahoma still prohibits the sale of all mixed drinks containing spirits, and Kansas allows them only in private clubs.

Yet in more easy-going states, permissiveness has been the order of the day where teenagers are concerned since the early 1970s. The argument that brought 18-year-olds the vote — "If he's old enough to fight, he's old enough to vote" — brought them the right to buy alcoholic drinks. At that time drugs were the real worry.

Now it is teenage alcoholism that is alarming parents, teachers and the health authorities. This is not a disease of the ghettoes, but of the affluent and often alienated youth of the suburbs.

It is not unknown for 16- and 17-year-olds to drive to school and, in their lunch-breaks, return to their cars and the bottles in them, turning up tipsy for afternoon classes. The average age for taking a first drink has dropped to under 13. And reformers reckoned without the motor-car. In 1976, 113,000 young people were arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol. So the states are having second thoughts. Michigan has gone the furthest; it has raised the age for legal drinking to 21. Maine recently raised it to 20, Minnesota, Iowa and Montana to 19.

At 21 the law covers the majority of college students, at 19 virtually all high school students. No doubt the underaged will prevail upon their older friends to buy them drinks. But 19-year-olds seldom consort with 15- or 16-year-olds, so at least the youngest may be safeguarded. At present half the states outlaw the sale of spirits to people under 21; only 14 states allow sales to anyone who has reached 18.

An interesting question is whether such laws violate the new legislation prohibiting discrimination on account of age. Owners of empty bars are seeking the answer. As a practical matter, however, even the distillery industry is spending money to warn teenagers against immoderate tippling. A drunken 16-year-old is no advertisement for Chivas Regal.

By MALCOLM BROWNE
New York Times

The race is on among laboratories in California, France, the Netherlands, the Soviet Union and elsewhere to achieve what may be the unattainable — a temperature of absolute zero.

They are now within a thousandth of a degree of their goal; but physical laws make further progress difficult.

(Ed. Note: Finnish scientists this month claimed to have come within 30 billionths of a degree of absolute zero.)

It is no mere sporting competition; the reward is in the fact that each time the temperature is pushed a little lower, new scientific discoveries are made.

A Benchmark

Constant values such as the speed of light, the gravitational constant, and zero are benchmarks upon which scientists build their work. The absolute zero of heat is one to which scientists are devoting increasing study. Besides deepening human understanding of the nature of matter, their labor seems certain to revolutionize the technologies of energy, computers and many other fields in the near future.

The absolute zero of heat has been calculated from theory as a temperature of minus 273.15 degrees Celsius (minus 459.67 degrees Fahrenheit). This is the temperature at which all thermal motion of atoms stops, and it is the coldest temperature possible.

In recent months, physicists have devised refrigerators capable of forcing temperatures down to within a thousandth of a degree of absolute zero. But the same group of physical laws (thermodynamics) from which scientists calculate the exact value of absolute zero also states that no man-made refrigerator can ever quite reach that ultimate abyss of cold.

Last month scientists at Cornell University succeeded in subjecting the gas xenon to such an enormous pressure and low temperature that the gas was temporarily converted into a metallic form capable of conducting electricity. Metallic forms of other more common gases, including hydrogen, are expected to follow.

In practical terms, the rise of superconductors opens the possibility of electric power lines that would conserve the vast quantities of energy now lost simply by transmission.

Earlier this year, the University of Wisconsin at Madison began designing a superconductive power storage system the size of a football stadium, capable of storing excess electricity for use during peak load periods. The core of the Inductor-Converter unit, as it is called, will be a superconducting magnet, in which an electric current, once started, will continue to flow until withdrawn. Operating near the absolute zero, the installation would be buried to reduce insulation problems.

Atoms 'March'

But for research scientists the chief excitement of new ultra-low temperatures results more from the scientific insights they yield than from technological applications.

(In) certain forms of ultra-cold liquid helium, for example . . . the atoms seem, in effect, to march in step, so that it is possible to study the behavior of a single atom simply by studying the whole fluid.

Free Shares Spur Rush Of Citizenship Queries

NANAIMO (CP) — Canadian citizenship applications tripled immediately after Premier Bill Bennett announced each citizen would receive five free shares of the British Columbia Resources Investment Corporation, David Helliwell, corporation president, said Thursday.

The increase, he said, is one of the intial effects that Premier Bennett's announcement Jan. 12 that residents meeting eligibility requirements, including Canadian citizenship, will receive free shares in the corporation, worth about $10 each.

Darlene Scott, supervisor of citizenship examiners, said in an interview from Vancouver the number of telephone queries jumped to 60 from the normal rate of 20 a day after the announcement.

"In many cases, the calls came from people who became citizens some time ago, but now need documented proof of citizenship to qualify for the free shares. Even now the applications are coming in at a higher rate than normal and they will keep us quite busy."

Helliwell said the corporation has received an amazing number of telephone calls and letters inquiring about the shares.

"We are in the process of having the application forms finalized for printing so that they are available at all banks, credit unions, etc. through the province, from March 15 to June 15, which is the closing date for applications."

The corporation is also establishing a legal arrangement whereby a person who can't get to a bank can have someone else pick up his or her shares, he said.

"Nobody with the required qualifications in B.C. can be overlooked and every effort is being made to ensure that all citizens in the province benefit from the free shares offer."

IWA's Munro Urges Defeat of Socreds

CRANBROOK (CP) — Union members in British Columbia must work together to ensure that the New Democratic Party becomes the government in the next provincial election, Jack Munro, regional vice-president of the International Woodworkers of America, said Thursday night.

Munro told a rally attended by about 600 trade unionists that if Social Credit is re-elected they will introduce right-to-work legislation. An election is expected this year.

"Right-to-work is Utopia for the rich and to hell with the workers," he said. "We must insure the Socreds are not re-elected."

Munro said the NDP, which was in power in British Columbia from 1972-75, was the only provincial government to bring in good labor legislation.

$119.5M Extra In Taxes

A reduction in the teacher-pupil ratio cost B.C. property owners $119.5 million more in 1978 than in 1973, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Thursday.

Wolfe said that during the five-year period, school districts increased their staffs by 5,479 teachers, reducing the teacher-pupil ratio to 18.12 in 1978 from 22.68 in 1973.

The minister said the basic school levy, set by the provincial government, would have been 30 mills in 1978 instead of 39.75 if the ratio had remained at the 1973 level.

He said school budgets increased 115.3 per cent in the last five years while enrolment has declined seven-tenths of a per cent.

Bank Sees 3% Gain In B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although the B.C. economy is not sitting pretty, its over-all growth will slightly outpace the rest of Canada in 1979, says the Bank of Montreal's economic forecast released Thursday.

"The position we're taking is that the B.C. economy will grow at or above the national level in 1979," said Gene Nesmith, the bank's senior vice-president, B.C. division.

The province's real economic growth rate is expected to be as high as three per cent in 1979, one of the highest in Canada, he told a news conference.

The bank predicts the national average will be 2.25 per cent.

The national average is down from last year's 3.5 per cent and well below the 3.4 per cent growth rate predicted Jan. 22 by the Conference Board in Canada, a prominent Ottawa-based economic forecasting organization.

The bank says, however, that B.C.'s unemployment and inflation rates will be close to the national average.

It says the national inflation rate will decline to 7½ per cent in 1979, compared with nine per cent in 1978. Unemployment will reach 8.9 per cent, up one-half point from 1978.

"All in all, the over-all outlook for the province is not very exciting," he said. "There are, however, a good number of bright spots."

Man Jailed 18 Months In Gun Death Accident

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A 21-year-old Prince George man who accidentally shot and killed his neighbor was sentenced Thursday to 18 months in jail after pleading guilty to careless use of a firearm.

Robbie Thomas Murray was charged after John Lewis Fowlie, 18, was hit by a .22-calibre bullet while preparing to go to bed June 8, 1978.

Court was told that Murray was sitting in his apartment across the street when the gun he was holding discharged. The bullet went through open windows in both residences before striking Fowlie.

Riding Picks MLA

BURNABY (CP) — MLA Rosemary Brown, who will lose her old riding of Vancouver-Burrard through redistribution, has been chosen to represent the New Democratic Party in the riding of Burnaby-Edmonds in the next provincial election.

Ms. Brown defeated her only competitor, Frank Ward, by a four-to-one margin in voting Wednesday night. Ray Loewen of Social Credit currently holds the seat.

Kamloops Silenced

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A British Columbia Telephone Company computer breakdown cut off service entirely for 13,000 telephones here for 1 1-2 hours Thursday and affected long-distance calling in 28 other interior communities, said a company spokesman.

Ron Schneider, custom services manager, said local and long-distance telephone service in the south part of the city was cut off by a problem in the memory portion of the company's central processing unit here.

Too Many Fishboats

VANCOUVER (CP) — West Coast salmon fishermen can expect tough times this year, delegates to the inaugural meeting of the Pacific Fisheries Management Advisory Council were told Thursday.

Dr. Wally Johnson, spokesman for the federal deparment of fisheries, said the main problem is that there are too many boats for the number of fish available.

Tribunal Chairman

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mediator Charles Stewart has been appointed to head a three-man tribunal to administer the affairs of Local 602 of the International Laborers Union.

Don Munroe, chairman of the provincial labor relations board, made the appointment following a ruling by the British Columbia Court of Appeal last week.

In that ruling, Mr. Justice J. D. Taggart said the international union, which placed the 4,000-member local under trusteeship 18 months ago following allegations of voting irregularities in local elections, would have to give up control when the tribunal was in place.

Drug Trial Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five men charged last year with conspiracy to import heroin were ordered Thursday to stand trial April 23 in British Columbia Supreme Court.

Gordon Charles Simpson, 34, Gerald Cooper, 32, David William McPherson, Gary Maxwell Shindelki and Gary Edward Barker were arrested last February and charged following the seizure of 31 kilos of the drug valued at about $39 million.

Ready-Mix Workers Back

VERNON (CP) — About 160 employees of 16 Ready-Mix Concrete plants in the Interior and Kootenay regions returned to work Thursday after the B.C. Labor Relations Board ordered an end to a lockout, spokesmen for two plants here said.

A union spokesman said the companies offered the workers an increase of 60 cents an hour in each year of a two-year contract but the workers are seeking parity with workers on the Coast.

Glazier Walkout Illegal

The Labor Relations Board ruled illegal Thursday a province-wide walkout by glassworkers that began three days ago.

The workers, represented by the Glaziers Union, began walking off the job Wednesday in a protest over what they claim is an erosion of their traditional work by other construction trades.

A board spokesman said strike action is not the way to solve the dispute and if the glaziers continue their walkout, the board will likely issue a cease-and-desist order.

No Local Fears on Tides

Despite a San Diego scientist's prediction of unusually high tides world-wide this weekend there is no cause for alarm on the west coast of B.C.

Dr. Rick Thompson, an oceanographer with the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Pat Bay, said there's nothing special about the tides which will reach their highest level of the year today and Saturday.

The high today was 9.7 feet or three metres reached at 11:40 a.m. On Saturday the same high is predicted an hour later in the day.

Thompson said the high tide is well off the all-time record for Victoria — 12.17 feet on Dec. 11, 1969.

Fergus Wood, a retired oceanographer with the United States National Ocean Survey warned Thursday the alignment of the moon and sun will produce unusually high tides world-wide and could result in flooding in low-lying areas where there are accompanying strong winds.

The moon's gravitational pull is the main force governing ocean tides, but the study showed tides have been highest when three unusual factors combine:

First, the sun, earth and moon align briefly along a straight line. This occurs twice a month, at the time of the full and new moon, and results in what are known as spring tides, in which the range between high and low tides is about 20 per cent greater than normal.

Second, the moon makes its closest approach to earth. The distance between earth and its satellite varies each month from 404,336 to 354,433 kilometres. When they are closest, at a point called the perigee, the tidal range is again 20 per cent greater than normal.

Finally, these events, occurring within minutes of each other, pull the moon even closer to earth, adding a few more percentage points to the tide range, Wood said.

He said the three-way astronomical coincidence occurs predictably every few years, but does not follow a regular cycle.

Aviation Museum In City

The Pacific Aviation Museum has found temporary headquarters in Victoria after failing to obtain a lease on one of the old RCAF hangars at Vancouver's Jericho Beach.

President Keith Reed, a Victoria lawyer, said the museum was offered a generous lease in Market Square by Abacus Corp, the square's owners .

The museum will have 6,500 square feet of covered space to exhibit the society's collection which includes two aircraft and a growing collection of historic aviation memorabilia, including photographs and documents.

Hydro Faking Projection - NDP

B.C. Hydro's exaggeration of future energy needs is further proof the Crown corporation is looking for excuses to develop nuclear energy, NDP environment critic Bob Skelly of Alberni said Thursday..

Hydro predicted B.C.'s energy needs will grow 6.2 per cent annually over the next 15 years, while the B.C. Energy Commission puts the figure at 2.5 per cent.

The discrepancy indicates Hydro should not be setting policy, Skelly said.

All energy policy for the province should be made by the energy commission and Hydro should be made to follow suit, he said.

He said Hydro's predictions are based on "blind desire of the corporation to build more dams and eventually to get into nuclear power generation simply for the aggrandizement of the corporation and its chief executive (Bob Bonner)."

Skelly said Bonner has already been promoting nuclear power and the Hydro energy-need projection is partly designed to support his proposal.

If Hydro follows its own projections, there is a real danger that more generating facilities will be built than the province needs, he said.

School Board Offers Bonuses for Good Ideas

Good ideas from employees are worth rewarding, Greater Victoria school board has decided.

The board will give bonuses to teaching and non-teaching staff who contribute ideas to improve the education system.

The plan was suggested by Trustee John Young, who reintroduced a motion defeated by last year's board.

Young said it is common practice in business and industry to reward employees who come up with good ideas.

He said the board should welcome criticism of its policies and of the system by its staff.

Bonuses should be granted employees who come up with ideas that will make the system more responsive to learning needs of students, save money on supplies and equipment or run schools more efficiently, Young said.

Adds Two Directors

Camosun College has added two directors to its senior administrative staff.

Dr. Lou Dryden has been appointed director of supporting services, a position created last fall. Dryden heads the program evaluation team at the Educational Research Institute of B.C.

Another new post, director of health and human services, will be filled by Joy Vernon, chairman of the B.C. Manpower Council for the developmentally disabled. Vernon is also supervisor of the child care and developmental disabilities program at Douglas College in Burnaby.

Dryden begins in March and will be responsible for student records, registration, institutional research and public information.

He holds a doctorate in educational administration from the University of Calgary.

Vernon starts at Camosun in April. She is a nurse with a master's degree in social work.

The division she heads was created to bring under one director existing college programs in health and human services and a diploma nursing program planned for the future.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market appeared to be heading for its third record high this week in active mid-afternoon trading.

The company, owned 95-per-cent by Norin Corp., said Thursday it agreed to amalgamate with Port Colborne and St. Lawrence Navigation Co. Ltd. and Norin Canada Holdings Inc. It also declared an interim dividend of 12.06 cents a share.

Maple Leaf's stock closed last at $19. There was no trading by 2 p.m. Friday.

Among other industrials, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas rose 2⅜ to $61½, Trans Mountain PipeLine A ⅞ to $9½, Magna International Inc. B ⅞ to $15⅜, Hudson's Bay Co. ¾ to $21⅜ and Murphy Oil ⅝ to $15⅞.

Imasco Ltd. fell ¾ to $38, Torstar Corp. B ⅝ to $17⅛, Gulf Canada Ltd. ⅛ to $37¾, Harding Carpets A 10 cents to $3.30.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly again today in buying attributed to hopes that interest rates might be at or near a peak.

These hopes have been inspired by a marked slowdown of late in the growth rate of the money supply. That, in turn, has been interpreted as a signal that the Federal Reserve Board may not seek to tighten credit any further in its anti-inflation campaign.

Rolm Corp. climbed 4¼ to $57½. The company voted a 2-for-1 stock split.

Mobil, which proposed a 2-for-1 split and increased its dividend, rose 2 to $72.

National Airlines gained 2¼ to $35⅞. Eastern Airlines issued a statement calling for it to be given an equal chance to bid against Pan American World Airways for National.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) - All major indices advanced as prices posted major advances in moderate afternoon trading at the Montreal Stock Exchange. The 85-stock composite index climbed 0.78 to 236.57. Volume at 2 p.m. EST was 465,617 shares, compared to the 411,357 shares traded up to the same time Thursday. Bank of Montreal led winners, up ¼ at $27 on a volume of 24,820 shares traded.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — Prices on the London stock market were narrowly higher near the close of trading. The Financial Times index rose 2.5 to 461.1. Industrials made small gains but gold stocks eased. Canadian stocks were firmer.

—VANCOUVER—

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were up in moderately-active trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume to 10:54 a.m. was 1,313,436 shares.

In the industrials, Taro was down .05 at $3.05 on 5,900 shares, International Hydrodynamics was unchanged at .14 on 3,000, Hal Roach was up .15 at $2.45 on 2,500 and Goldale A was down .10 at $4.15 on 1,500. Keg Restaurants was unchanged at $1.75 and Grouse Mountain was unchanged at .80.

On the resource and development board, Rhodes was up .01 at .76 on 61,500 shares, New Frontier was down .10 at $3.55 on 60,400, Belmoral Mines was up .30 at $3.85 on 35,700 and Westmount was up .15 at $3.40 on 32,350. Redford Mines was up .03 at .58 and Westmount Warrants was up .10 at .80.

On the curb exchange, Action Resources was up .06 at .98 on 80,000 shares, Beach Gold was unchanged at .14 on 17,500, Gillian Mines was up .01 at .11 on 16,000 and Bute Resources was up .03 at .78 on 14,500. Channel Copper was down .02½ at .23 and Meridian Resources was down .01 at .21.

PO Named Employer of the Year

OTTAWA (CP) — The trouble-plagued post office got a bouquet instead of a brickbat Thursday when it was named "employer of the year".

The Canadian Association of the Deaf presented the award to Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne, citing his department's willingness to hire deaf persons.

"It also notes the co-operation by employees and management in using sign language in the post office."

After Eleanor McPeake, the association's Ontario representative, presented the award, Lamontagne praised the ability and dedication of the deaf and other workers with disabilities.

"They don't need favors, just a fair chance to do the job," he said.

Lamontagne's office said in a news release the post office is the largest employer of deaf persons in Canada.

"It makes a continuous effort to accommodate its deaf employees and a number of supervisors and employees are involved in learning sign language to assist in better communication with those with hearing impediments."

Shortly after the award was presented to Lamontagne in his Parliament Hill office, it was business as usual in the Commons with Conservative postal critic Walter Dinsdale suggesting the Canadian public "is being taken to the cleaners by the government."

He was referring to Lamontagne's statement in a recent interview that the government underestimated the cost of Montreal's new Gateway postal terminal by at least $37.5 million.

Lamontagne told Dinsdale in the Commons that because Montreal's Gateway construction began just as the Olympic facilities and James Bay hydro development got under way, it was difficult and expensive to find skilled tradesmen for the postal project.

Motorists Ignored Injured

HAMILTON (CP) — Two men lay in the wreckage of a car on a busy city street Thursday as dozens of motorists driving by ignored them.

A young man who lives near the accident scene said he was driving home when he saw the steaming wreck and could not believe that no one was stopping to help.

Joe Meagher, 21, said he and his 17-year-old sister, a student nurse, called for help after telling both the driver and passenger not to move.

First Bank Strike Over in Two Days

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's first legal bank strike lasted only two days — and the union is happy with the result.

Unionized employees at the Montreal City and District Savings bank began filtering back to work early today, with computer and maintenance staff reporting for their regular midnight shift.

The union hailed the new wage package, which provides for a basic 11-per-cent increase, as a victory for all bank workers.

And management noted the bank had weathered the strike well. "There were no major problems, no ugly incidents, no run on the bank," said company spokesman Jacques Julien.

The mainly-female workers, who have been unionized for 12 years, "made some gains over what workers are getting in other banks," said union president Yvon Rivard.

The agreement would boost a nation-wide union drive to penetrate the major chartered banks, he said, adding:

"We owe this victory to the pugnacity and solidarity of our members and this should serve as an example to other workers in financial institutions who are not unionized."

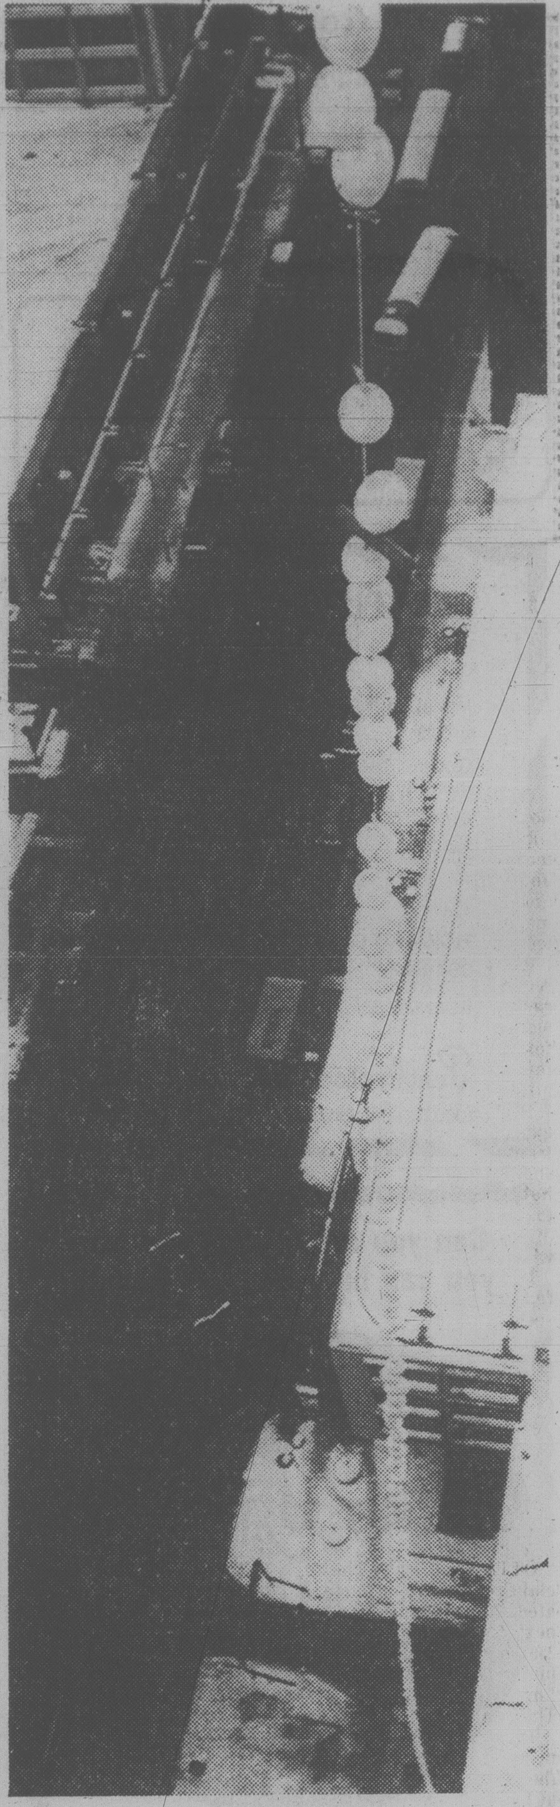
The 950 workers voted by a 61-per-cent margin to accept the 11-per-cent wage increase, which will boost their average weekly salary to about $220 from $199. Each also gets a lump-sum payment worth another one per cent, or about $100, Rivard said.

The bank managed to keep open 60 of its 111 area branches Wednesday and 90 on Thursday. Supervisors from head office helped managers and assistant managers serve the public.

"Our accountant doubled up as a teller and I did my own secretarial work," said one manager. "It's a relief to know it will be business as usual Friday."

One customer, Sana Ladki, actually enjoyed the strike. "I much prefer male tellers, they're so much more efficient."

The union campaigned for a 13-per-cent increase, but Rivard told the ratification meeting that 11 per cent plus the bonus was the best they would get without a long strike.



EGGED ON by hopes of a Guinness record, employees of the Ontario Egg Marketing Board strung together 1,700 eggs, then dangled them from the top of Ottawa's downtown Holiday Inn. The yolks were all sucked out before the eggs were strung together for the promotion stunt.

Great Big Truck Haunting Horner

HORNER
. . . too much to swallow

OTTAWA (CP) — A 300-ton diesel truck keeps coming back to haunt Industry Minister Jack Horner.

The story began two weeks ago in China when Horner, leading a Canadian trade delegation, boasted to the Chinese that General Motors of Canada produces the world's largest mining truck.

"She has a capacity of three million tons and, gentlemen, that is a lot of tons," said the minister, to groans of embarrassment from his delegation.

Horner later had to admit that the truck, in fact, has a carrying capacity of 300 tons.

Progressive Conservative George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings) wondered in the Commons Thursday if all the minister's information is similarly unreliable.

Aging Profs a Glut:U Heads

OTTAWA (CP) — Academia is threatened by a growing glut of aging professors as student enrolment continues to decline, top university officials told the Senate committee on retirement age policy Thursday.

They recommended that age 65 remain the normal, but not mandatory retirement age. They advocated that as much flexibility as possible be granted so that some teachers can retire early to make way for youth while older, wise and productive teachers can stay on.

They said there is no widespread trend among universities and colleges to retire faculty early but that most are thinking of such policies now.

Otherwise, said Lloyd Barber, president of the University of Regina, "for the next 15 years, there is no way of bringing in young blood."

Claude Thibault, executive-director of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, said enrolment is declining dramatically while the thousands of teachers hired in the sixties are still there. About 75 per cent of them are between age 30 and 49.

Thibault said that even with a freeze on hiring across the country, only 300 of the current 30,000 secondary school teachers will leave the system — by retirement or dying — each year during the next two decades.

Compounding the problem is the prediction that between the years 1995 and 2000, enrolments will rise again, requiring the same infusion of professors that were needed between 1965 and 1972.

Flexibility in retirement age was necessary to maintain good quality education. While a physicist peaks in ability at about age 32, he said a historian might not peak until age 70.

"When do politicians peak?" asked Senator David Croll, the Ontario Liberal senator who is chairman of the committee.

"I refuse to answer on grounds I might incriminate you," Barber replied to the 78-year-old political veteran.

Council of Women Raps Strikes, Pot

OTTAWA (CP)— A National Council of Women submission to government today calls for stronger anti-strike measures, continued criminal laws against marijuana and tougher protection against pollution.

Along with these and other recommendations on a wide range of issues, the 86-year-old women's group also asks for better tax breaks for members of voluntary organizations such as itself.

It says that out-of-pocket expenses such as day care, transportation and food should be considered a charitable contribution, and thus tax deductible, for members of voluntary organizations when providing services.

In its annual brief to the federal cabinet the council seeks new rape laws that would treat the crime as a form of assault instead of a sexual violation against the victim.

It advocates stricter laws against obscenity and commends the government for recent proposals to ban child pornography, saying this conforms to its members objective "to conserve the highest good for the family."

It proposes a national code system to identify the content of food clearly and precisely on packages.

The council says tougher methods of averting of current labor laws are necessary to appease what it calls growing resentment over abuses of the collective bargaining process.

"The many lawful and unlawful strikes and practices such as booking off sick, study sessions, etc., which are part of the present collective bargaining system, are responsible for inconvenience, expense and lack of freedom to the public as individuals and proprietors and employees of businesses not involved in the strike," the brief says.

The council says marijuana should not be decriminalized. It quotes the addiction Research Foundation of Ontario saying marijuana impairs short-term memory and logical thinking, among other ill effects.

OWN WINGS REQUIRED?

OTTAWA (CP) — Getting a job as an Air Canada steward or stewardess appears to be quite a challenge.

Not one of nearly 10,000 people interviewed for these jobs in 1977 could make the grade, figures supplied to Senator Jack Marshall (PC—Newfoundland) seemed to indicate.

Marshall told the Senate Wednesday it was amazing that the government-owned airline received 9,538 applications for jobs as stewards and stewardesses, but did not hire one person.

"If this is an example of what they are doing — going to the trouble of advertising for stewards and stewardesses, receiving 9,538 applications, and going to the expense of interviewing them when it is obvious that their original intention was not to hire anyone — then I consider it ridiculous," he said.

"If 9,000 people applied for those positions and not one was hired, it suggests an incredibly high standard or some other factor which should be explained," he said.

Sex Course

TORONTO (UPC) — Ontario Education Minister Bette Stephenson has promised to look into a school program in human relations that parents complain encourages pre-marital sex, prostitution and homosexuality.

The parents' group said the program includes material on arousal of sexual partners, how to teach about homosexuality.

Social Credit Lacks Only 259

OTTAWA (CP) — The Social Credit party has nominated 23 candidates for the next federal election, only 259 short of having a complete slate, party leader Lorne Reznowski said Thursday.

The party has candidates nominated in Quebec and the West, but hopes to field at least 235 across the country, he said. There will be 282 seats in the redistributed House of Commons.

Reznowski explained his party's plans for the election at a news conference called be formally announce the resignation of the party's Quebec lieutenant, Pierre Bernier. It has been known for some days that Bernier is quitting.

The leader said Bernier resigned because of personal financial difficulties. A new lieutenant probably would be chosen from among the nine Social Credit MPs, all of them from Quebec, in the Commons.

Reznowski, an English literature professor from Winnipeg, said he is working to increase the party's strength in the West. He said enthusiasm for party's platform is growing in the West, but said only three Social Credit candidates have been nominated there.

Reznowski said he will run again, despite his disastrous finish in the Oct. 16, byelection in the Manitoba riding of St. Boniface, where he finished a dismal fourth.

He said he is weighing invitations to run in four provinces.

Unity Report Greeted Favorably

Canadian Press

By and large, the report on Canadian unity released Thursday received favorable reaction from across the country although, as is usual with wide-ranging reports, there was no consensus.

The 152-page document, released in Ottawa, made 175 recommendations, among them that Quebecers should have the right to determine their own political future, that the province has the right to protect its language, culture and distinctive character. It also said that minority language rights should be determined locally by each province.

Two of the main antagonists in the unity debate, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Quebec Premier Rene Levesque, drew different conclusions.

Trudeau said the report rejects Quebec independence as unacceptable and unworkable.

Levesque, in Washington explaining his province's aspirations to an audience at the National Press Club, said concessions to Quebec will whet the appetite of Quebecers for more.

He said the proposals leave the province like "a half-pregnant woman — half in and half out."

He also thought English-speaking Canadians might have difficulty in accepting the idea of special status for Quebec.

He said he and his cabinet will study intensively the unity report and withhold detailed comment until Saturday.

Trudeau described the report as a landmark contribution to the national unity debate and told the Commons he is particularly pleased the the task force has "largely supported the official language policies of the government."

Opposition Leader Joe Clark said the document was helpful and said it confirmed the view that the Trudeau government's constitutional policies have been "dramatically out of step with reality"

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said the report was positive and beneficial.

Quebec nationalist Guy Bouthillier, director-general of the Montreal Ste. Jean Baptiste Society's policy committee, said the report would fuel the constitutional debate "in English Canada for 20 years — long after Quebec has opted for independence."

Alex Paterson, co-chairman of the federalist and largely English-speaking Positive Action Committee, said he opposed the suggestion that provinces determine an official language or languages.

"It has been our position that language rights be entrenched in the constitution."

On the suggestion that Quebec be allowed the right of self-determination, he said: "I wouldn't want to put too much importance on that. It seems to be the most academic and hypothetical conclusion the task force came to."

Over all, most people agreed that the report, officially called the Task Force on Canadian Unity, was useful although Richard Hatfield, premier of New Brunswick, said Wednesday the the whole thing was a waste of time.

On Thursday, he said language rights should be enshrined in the constitution, adding that the rights should not be decided by the provinces any more than should other fundamental rights.

Daigle said Hatfield was operating on a double standard because the premier had appointed several provincial study groups, commissions and committees.

Gilbert Jean, president of the Society of Acadians of New Brunswick, said the report "appears to be a series of measures designed to speed up the assimilation process and the disappearance of francophones outside Quebec."

Premier William Davis of Ontario said he gained the impression from the report that the task force was saying that while Canada will continue to need a strong national government there must be more flexibility and more authority for provincial governments.

Marcel Lambert, a PC member of Parliament from Edmonton, said he is opposed to the idea that Quebec's future should be decided by Quebecers in a referendum.

Premier Bill Bennett of British Columbia said the report will provide useful advice to Canadian governments in negotiations for a new constitution.

Asked whether he agreed that Quebecers should decide their political future, he said Canada could never force any people to be unwilling members of the country.

However, Grant Notley, leader of Alberta's New Democratic Party and a strong federalist, said the task force dwelled on possible separatist threats so long that it ignored Canada's real problems.

Notley said the task force conducted an intellectual exercise instead of promoting unity by tackling economic problems aggravating the separatist itch.

Quebec should be allowed to leave Confederation if it wants, he said, "but the PQ (Parti Quebecois) won't get into that sort of thing because it knows it won't get a mandate."

CONSTITUTION WILL TAKE TIME

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reform of the constitution is going to take years, federal Justice Minister Marc Lalonde said Thursday after federal and provincial ministers completed up four days of talks on the complex issue.

Lalonde, a co-chairman at the final discussions leading up to next month's meeting on the constitution between Prime Minister Trudeau and provincial leaders, said representatives from the two levels of government had made progress but would give no details.

He did say, however, that Canadians have to be realistic and understand that the constitution will not be changed this year — "it will take years."

Federal and provincial leaders have given a greater degree of urgency to constitutional reform since the election of the Parti Quebecois government in Quebec in 1976. Quebec plans a referendum this year to seek authority to negotiate separation from Canada.

The Vancouver meeting, third and final in a series since November, was complicated Tuesday when provincial ministers were given their first glimpse of the report of the Task Force on Canadian Unity.

Sources said the release of the study, led by Jean-Luc Pepin, former Liberal cabinet minister, and former Ontario premier John Robarts, brought the talks almost to a grinding halt.

But Lalonde said the ministers had nevertheless defined the issues to be placed before the premiers in Ottawa Feb. 5 and 6.

Quebec Vows Arms

WASHINGTON (WP) — Quebec Premier Rene Levesque, in an effort to gain American support for plans to turn his province into a sovereign nation, asserted Thursday that an independent Quebec would become a "staunch partner" in the Western alliance.

In a major attempt to explain the program of his separatist Parti Quebecois, Levesque said at a National Press Club luncheon that an independent Quebec would maintain its own military forces but would assume security responsibilities in cooperation with the United States and Canada.

"I ask you to understand that Quebec is going to remain a strong, staunch partner on this continent," he said. "One thing that we would not change is the old friendship with the Americans."

In his first appearance here since he was elected in 1976, Mr. Levesque also indicated that he may abandon plans to replace all roadway "STOP" signes in Quebec with "ARRET" because this would be taking francization to the "ridiculous."

IJC POST GOES TO HODGSON

OTTAWA (CP) - Stuart Hodgson, long known as the ambassador of the North, has been given a new job, but not the one he really wanted.

Commissioner of the Northwest Territories since 1967, the burly 55-year-old former labor leader credited with making the North better known to Canadians has been appointed to the International Joint Commission, effective April 15.

He will be replaced by John Parker who has served alongside Hodgson over the years.

It is expected that Hodgson will take over from retiring Maxwell Cohen as Canadian co-chairman of the Canada-United States joint commission that deals with environmental and water problems crossing the thousands of miles of international border.

But northern affairs insiders have said the job that Hodgson really wanted was that of commissioner overseeing construction of the northern natural gas pipeline to be built from Alaska through the Yukon and Alberta to the U.S.

HODGSON
. . . wanted pipe job

The insiders said Hodgson began talking with Prime Minister Trudeau about that job in 1977 after ending 10 years running the vast territory.

Mitchell Sharp, who had served in the cabinet for years as finance minister, external affairs minister and leader in the Commons, among other things, got that job.

Gov't Yields On SIN Use

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate received the first indication Thursday that a Progressive Conservative campaign against widespread use of social insurance numbers may be paying off.

Government Leader Ray Perrault said the Canadian Transport Commission (CTC) is revising its regulations so passengers will no longer have to supply their social insurance number to take advantage of lower-priced air fares.

Perrault told Conservative Senator Duff Roblin (Manitoba) CTC regulations have required the social insurance number — commonly referred to as SIN — to identify passengers on domestic charter flights.

The commission realized use of SIN as an all-purpose identification card is a sensitive issue, and decided to use documents such as passports and birth certificates for identification instead, Perrault said.

For several months, Conservatives have blasted the government for encouraging the use of SIN as an identity card.

They fear that a computer operator could piece together every detail of a person's life from cradle to grave: School record, employment record, medical history, credit rating and any criminal convictions.

Misuses of the number by the government amounts to bureaucratic tyranny, says former prime minister John Diefenbaker, who refuses to apply for a number. It is "a passport to tyranny that should be removed if freedom is to be preserved," he told the Commons in November.

New Democrat Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster) argues that general use of SINs is the "most dangerous invasion of privacy that man has seen in this century."

Employment Minister Bud Cullen, whose department issues the numbers, says most Canadians want the numbers to be used for their protection. They are also necessary for "the smooth functioning of government administration," he has said.

Health Minister Monique Begin has said the numbers protect against higher taxes by preventing fraud in social security programs.

I Never Loved Michelle: Marvin

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — Lee Marvin fixed his famed icy stare across a courtroom at his former lover Thursday and calmly testified that he had not loved her during the six years they lived together.

Marvin, 54, told a lawyer for Michelle Triola Marvin that he may have become "enamored" of her at some point but did not fall in love.

The affair broke up in 1970 and she now is suing him for $1 million, to which she says she is entitled much as a former wife would be.

"Wasn't it a fact that when you left for England to film The Dirty Dozen, you loved Michelle?" Lawyer Marvin Mitchelson asked. "No," Marvin said flatly.

"Isn't it a fact you considered her the only woman in the world for you?" the lawyer asked.

"No," Marvin declared.

The lawyer's questions were based on declarations of affection made by Marvin in a series of love letters he wrote to Michelle during the first years of their love affair.

Earlier during the day's hearing, Marvin testified that he was intimate with Miss Marvin in a dressing room and in an apartment about three weeks after he first met her in 1964 on the film set of Ship of Fools.

Each night after intimacy had taken place he would return to the home of his first wife Betty, he told the court.

He said he was having marital problems at the time when he met Miss Marvin but still returned home each night to his wife.

About three months after the conclusion of filming on Ship of Fools, he left his wife and the couple began living together.

Marvin said that although he told the singer he loved her, he only thought of her as "good fun" and "very enjoyable."

Mitchelson produced eight letters Marvin wrote in 1966 while he was filming The Dirty Dozen.

"Things in London are about the same — dull," he wrote in one letter. "Not that I ain't looking. But there's nothing here that compares to you, you, you."

In the letter, Marvin referred to her as "my love."

"Was she your love?" asked Mitchelson.

"Did you want her to love you?"

"I don't think so."

$25,500 ARTS GRANT

The B.C. Cultural Fund has awarded a grant of $25,500 to the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria.

A total of $340,000 was distributed from the fund to 72 community arts councils throughout the province.

The fund, originally established by the former Social Credit government, consists of interest generated from the fund's $20 million endowment and receipts from provincial lottery funds.

In announcing the grants, awarded annually, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, said more than 46 per cent of each grant comes from lottery funds.

"We hope these grants will continue to provide an incentive for municipal and regional governments to become more involved with local arts groups and projects," he said.

The grants are based on a per capita formula, the object being to provide incentives and assistance to local recreational and amateur arts activities.

The Victoria Community Arts Council, like others, administers the grant principally to provide assistance where requested, in the form of small grants to amateur cultural groups in the area, and to sponsor performing and craft festivals.

Frightening and Violent Scenes (B.C. Director)

Of Brothers and Sisters, Fathers and Sons

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Christopher Lemmon, 24-year-old son of superstar Jack Lemmon, is getting the break of his young show biz life in the new TV college caper series, Brothers and Sisters.

Chris believes he looks like his father but most observers believe differently. He is taller, at 6-foot-2, than his old man and appreciably more rugged in appearance.

Unlike many a second generation actor, Chris is not overcome by suspicions of inadequacy, overwhelmed by guilt for capitalizing on the family reputation nor inspired to rebellious disassociation from his famous name.

Chris is not sure that talent is inherited, but said, "I would think if a kid respects his parents he's going to emulate them to a certain degree. I have enormous love and respect for Dad.

"I can see some similarities in my reactions and delivery on screen. But I'm not trying to be Jack Lemmon."

His father was responsible for Chris' first Hollywood break. He arranged an interview for his son with the producers of Airport '77 in which Jack was starring. Chris landed a small role with a dozen lines.

"I got my Screen Actors Guild card with that part," Chris said. "Then I went out and got a TV commercial all on my own. After that I played a hippie in Class of '65. All this time I was studying at Cal Arts."

Chris is candid about his admiration for his father. Living with his father, he says, was worth years of study at the Actors Studio.

"Dad and I have an enormously close relationship," he went on. "Being around Dad was like 24 years of acting lessons. He let me ask questions and always gave me the right answers.

"He raised me. I'm his kid. He was and is a fine, fine father. He's the one who encouraged me to become an actor. Dad felt I had some sort of natural ability and said there might be something decent there if I worked my buns off.

"So I started working my buns off. Studying piano was part of it. The discipline at the piano heightens and broadens an actor's timing.

"I played small parts in a couple of movies, trying to get my career to happen. I was the typical struggling young actor, I guess. I was offered the lead in Super Train. But I didn't want a series in which a train was the star and the actors were secondary. Then along came Brothers and Sisters.

"They had to cast the show in three days. I read three times before they asked me to do a screen test. The producers, Arthur Silver and Bob Bruner, sent me to NBC for the test and asked me to memorize five pages in a half-hour.

"I had no idea I was reading for Checko, the lead. When they told me to report to work in two days, I assumed I had a bit part. There was no way they were going to give me a lead. I had no credits or anything.

"Dad couldn't believe I got the lead. He went nuts. He said, 'I'll to be walking down the street with you and people will be asking who the old guy is with Chris Lemmon.' He'd love to see that happen. So would I."

Chris is unworried that his NBC fraternity house series was rushed into prime time TV to compete with two other campus shows on opposing networks. He is convinced Brothers and Sisters is "different and realistic."

Four-Bit Thief Gets Prison Term

SYRACUSE, N.Y.— Onondaga County Judge Patrick Cunningham had no sympathy for the man who pleaded guilty to attempted robbery and sentenced him to serve from 2½ years to seven years in prison for stealing 50 cents. "You take some guy who works hard. All he has is 50 cents and you steal it. If he had more, you would have taken more," Cunningham told David Hagen, 22, during sentencing. Hagen had nine previous convictions on misdemeanor charges, but had never been sentenced to prison. "Nothing seems to do this young many any good," Cunningham said. "Maybe some good hard time will straighten him out." He told Hagen: "You have a family. You have a child. And you don't care about either of them."

Pearce

Trudeau

BARNSTABLE, Mass.— Norman Mailer's divorce trial was recessed for a month after his fourth wife switched lawyers and the author disclaimed knowledge of his financial affairs. "I write books; I don't read contracts," Mailer said Thursday when pressed by his wife's lawyer. Ruth Budd, lawyer for Mailer's wife, Beverly, was questioning the author as to how much he has received in book advances. In dispute is a property settlement involving Mailer's income, homes on Cape Cod and in New York, and custody of the couple's two children.

OTTAWA — Margaret Trudeau has been released from hospital here after treatment last weekend to stop secondary hemorrhaging. Originally expected to be in the hospital a few more days, Mrs. Trudeau was released from Ottawa General Hospital Wednesday afternoon in good condition, a hospital spokesman said today.

TOOELE, Utah (AP) — Like Gary Gilmore before him, convicted killer Walter Wood has asked and been granted a sentence of death. Unlike Gilmore, Wood says he is not guilty. "I can't believe anyone can want to die," the judge said Thursday before sentencing Wood to be executed March 26 for the murder of an Indiana minister. Wood, 40, formerly of Quebec City, told the judge he wanted to be hanged. When a 12-member jury convicted Wood 10 days ago, he demanded: "Take me to the firing squad right now."

OTTAWA — Pat Pearce, one of the last original members of Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, will take early retirement April 1. Mrs. Pearce said Thursday that she will vacation in Ireland when she leaves the federal regulatory agency. She joined the CRTC when it was established in 1968 as one of five permanent commissioners and served on its executive. She fulfilled a full seven-year term and was reappointed for a five-year term in 1975. The only remaining commissioner who joined the CRTC in 1968 is 53-year-old Real Therrien.

SCITUATE, Mass. — Wherever they are, the fleeing parents of three-year-old Chad Green will make sure their son gets chemotherapy for his leukemia, the boy's grandmother says. The couple fled with the boy to seek someone who "believes in all aspects of cure," including Laetrile, Vera Green said Thursday. "I don't think they'll be far away from chemotherapy," Mrs. Green said, "they want the child to live."

LOS ANGELES — Richard Nixon, described four years ago as a man strapped for money, is a millionaire, with much of the money coming from book royalties and broadcast interviews, according to The Los Angeles Times.

The former U.S. president, who turned 66 earlier this month, has received more than $1 million from selling his memoirs and more than $500,000 for the David Frost interviews, the newspaper says.

56% Want Patty Freed Now

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A telephone poll indicated Thursday that 56 per cent of the people who volunteered their opinion believe Patricia Hearst should be freed from prison.

The San Francisco Chronicle, which conducted the poll, reported that it received 30,348 calls during a 24-hour period.

A total of 17,101 callers voted yes and 13,247 voted no.

The question was: Should Patty Hearst be freed now?

The newspaper said it was the heaviest response yet since it began a series of telephone polls on controversial topics.

The telephone poll is not a scientifically accurate survey of public opinion, the newspaper said, but "does give a strong indication of the way many Chronicle readers feel."

The callers' votes are registered automatically and there is no means of screening multiple calls from one person.

The newspaper conducted random interviews with some of the callers. It said a typical "yes" voter said: "I don't think Patty was ever really guilty."

The "no" attitude, the newspaper said, was typified by a man who said: "She's been a liar, a bank robber and was seen with an automatic weapon in that bank She had a fair trial. Now let her pay the consequences."

LIGHT AT THE END OF LONGEST TUNNEL

TOKYO (AP) — The world's longest tunnel, which runs through the mountainous spine of Japan's central Honshu Island, was completed Thursday, officials said. It took seven years to dig the 19 kilometres.

Construction workers celebrated in a "piercing" ceremony to mark the breakthrough. The tunnel was built to carry one of Japan's 240 km an hour "bullet trains."

About 1.5 million persons worked on the tunnel, beneath the Tanigawa Mountain, and 13 workmen were killed in accidents over the seven-year period.

A spokesman for the Japan Railway Construction Corp. said tunnel workers often were troubled by gushing water and falling rocks. Digging began in December 1971.

The bullet train is scheduled to make its first run through the tunnel in early 1981. Total cost of the project has been estimated at $6.3 billion.

When the train begins running, passengers will be able to get from Tokyo to Niigata on the Japanese seacoast in 90 minutes. That trip by conventional train now takes four hours.

Standard of Living Rise To Slow Down - Carter

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Carter issued a sobering economic report Thursday, warning that the average American's standard of living will improve only slowly for years to come.

The White House outlook now is for gains in real incomes only half as large — or less — than the 3 percent annual increase that once was considered the norm.

In 1979, with the economy held down deliberately to fight inflation, any improvement in living standards will be tiny.

The traditional visionary economic goals announced by most presidents were missing from Carter's report. In it, the president declared: "My economic and budgetary program deals forthrightly with the economic realities we face today."

The political reality means a struggle over how to divide an economic pie that is growing more slowly, a struggle that began this week with the release of Carter's fiscal 1980 budget. Black leaders, spokesmen for the elderly and representatives of cities have denounced efforts by Carter to reduce the federal deficit by trimming programs that aid their constituencies.

Nevertheless, Carter emphasized in the report: "The task now confronting us is to manage an economy operating at close to its capacity" — adding with a nod to his critics "to sustain prosperity and extend its benefits more widely among our citizens."

The principal reason for his new slower growth view of the future, according to the report, is the very slow growth of productivity — the volume of goods and services produced for each hour Americans work.

Without faster growth of productivity, the period of "austerity" Carter has launched will continue indefinitely.

"The disappointing performance of productivity, the related sharp drop in unemployment, and the acceleration of inflation brought the economy" to a point in 1978, the report said, that policy had to "switch from efforts to strengthen growth in economic activity to measures that restrain inflation."

Lowering the estimates of how fast productivity is likely to grow in the future also means lowering assumptions about how much the economy could produce if there were full employment. New calculations show that the economy's output last year was only about 2.5 percent below its potential. In other words, the recovery from the 1974-75 recession was largely completed.

In the first quarter of 1978, even though unemployment was still above 6 percent, new workers were being hired so fast that wage rates, and thus inflation, were pushed up, according to the report.

"The evidence suggests that under current labor market conditions, the danger of accelerating wages begins to mount as the rate of unemployment falls significantly below 6 percent. During 1978 the unemployment rate moved into the top of the range," it said.

In short, it concluded, "A further reduction of the unemployment rate during 1979 would run some risk of generating excess demand and creating inflationary pressures in labor markets."

The report forecasts gross national product growth, adjusted for inflation, of only 2.2 percent this year and 3.2 percent next year, compared to 4.3 percent last year. The forecast assumes there will be a marked slowdown in expansion in the second half of the year, but no actual decline and therefore no recession.

"In case you hadn't noticed," Carter's chief economic adviser Charles Schultze noted wryly at a briefing on the report: "Our economic forecast for the growth in GNP is somewhat more optimistic than many private forecasters." The private forecasters, as well as the Congressional Budget Office, expect a recession.

That optimism did not really extend to the productivity problem, however. The economic report said productivity increases had slowed in virtually every industry in America. The causes are "complex," and include a lower rate of investment by business, "a dramatic shift in the age-sex composition of employment," and "increased economic and social regulation."

QUAKE TOLL INCREASES FIVE-FOLD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five times more people perished in earthquakes in 1978 than in the year before, the U.S. Geological Survey reported Thursday.

Survey experts said the number of significant quakes rose to 62 from 36 in 1977, and the fatalities increased from to 15,195 from 2,800. The vast majority died in a single quake in Iran.

Waverly Person of the survey's National Earthquake Information Service noted, however, that there was no "great" earthquake — magnitude 8 or more on the Richter scale—in 1978.

Reunification Talks Planned for Koreas

SEOUL (Reuter) — South Korea today proposed holding a preliminary meeting between officials of North and South Korea before June, either in Seoul or Pyongyang, to pave the way for full-fledged talks on the reunification of Korea.

The statement follows recent radio broadcasts from North Korea.

Culture-information Minister Kim Sung-jin said in a statement that his government hopes "the directly responsible authorities of North Korea" would make a sincere response.

"We assume that the North Korean statement is an indication of its willingness to reaffirm the spirit and principles of the July 4, 1972, joint statement (between the two Koreas) and also to faithfully adhere to the agreed provisions of the statement . . . ," Kim said.

In a statement made by central committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland on Tuesday, North Korea suggested holding a joint north-south national conference in early September in Pyongyang, capital of North Korea, or Seoul.

North Korea welcomed a proposal Thursday by South Korean President Park Chung Hee to resume the dialogue, stalled since 1973, on reunification.

North Korea's official daily Rodong Sinmun described the proposal as heralding a "new start" in relations between the two countries.

'Raped' Woman Jailed

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — A young woman, who emotionally protested the verdict after the man accused of raping her was found not guilty, has been sentenced to 30 days in jail for her outburst.

Judge David Berry sentenced the 25-year-old woman to a month in jail for contempt of court.

She had called the rape-case verdict unfair and warned the jury, "You are going to pay," during a rambling statement before she tearfully left the courtroom under the judge's orders.

The woman sobbed quietly at the rear of the courtroom after the trial. "I was raped, and they put me in jail," she repeated several times as she was taken away.

Potential $2B Find Sparks Gold Rush

there has been a flurry of claim staking in the Juskatla Inlet area, which is south of Port Clement on Massett Inlet.

"All of a sudden the prospectors got wind of it and they started staking the whole country," said Williams.

He said that since Oct. 1978 about 90 separate claims have been recorded involving 1,230 individual units.

Each unit is 500 metres square and is the equivalent of what used to be known as a claim. Recent changes in provincial laws have made it possible for prospectors to lump a number of units under one claim.

Williams said most the new claims are crowded around the Consolidated site.

"The area has been very heavily staked. We're getting claims on top of claims. There has been a lot of overlapping because some people are hoping that somewhere along the line a survey might be necessary and they could pick up a few feet somewhere that had been missed."

Williams said similar flurries of claim staking always occur whenever someone strikes a rich mineral deposit.

"Everyone likes to get as close to the action as possible."

Williams said a number of companies as well as individuals have been staking claims.

The Queen Charlotte Islands were the site of B.C.'s first gold rush. In the early 1850s Indians in the Skidegate area started feverish prospecting activity when they began to trade gold-laden ore at the local Hudson Bay Company post.

The short-lived gold rush lasted about three years, and drew miners from throughout southern B.C. and as far south as California.

3 Shot In Bank Holdup

OSAKA (Reuter) — At least three people, including two policemen, were feared shot today by a shotgun-armed gunman holding about 40 hostages in a bank here after an abortive hold-up attempt, police reported.

Police said said two apparently wounded police officers could be seen motionless on the floor of the bank through a gap in the main door. It was possible a clerk also was shot in the head after he refused to hand the gunman money, police added.

Sporadic shots were heard from the building after the gunman said he would kill the hostages one by one if police approached the building.

A pregnant woman released by the gunman, who was wearing a white mask, told police that at least two of their men and a bank clerk had been shot and wounded.

She gave the police the gunman's written threat to kill the hostages.

A Tokyo television station reported that the clerk was shot in the head and killed after refusing to hand the gunman $256,000.

Police could not immediately confirm the report, but the released hostage said the clerk fell out of sight behind a metal grill after being shot at close range.

Nearly 500 police, backed by an armored car and about 70 other vehicles, sealed off the four-storey Mitsubishi Bank building in the city centre. Sharpshooters were placed at stragegic points.

Police quoted the released hostage as saying the gunman stormed into the bank about 30 minutes before closing time and fired a shot into the ceiling.

He then produced a bag and shouted to a clerk: "Put 50 million yen ($256,000 dollars) in this before I finish counting 10." After a brief quarrel, the clerk was shot in the head.

Diver Danny Hartlen prepares his boat bottom scrubbing equipment

He Really Knows The Bottom Line

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Danny Hartlen scrubs bottoms for a living.

Boat bottoms.

When he gets a call, he gathers up his drysuit, tanks, hydraulic pump and other gear and is off to his next floating client.

A pleasure diver for seven years, he now utilizes his experience to bring a unique service to local boaters.

While most people clean, or have others clean the bottom of their boat, either on shore or on the ways, Hartlen does the job while a boat is still tied up alongside.

He said he first got the idea when he was a crew member aboard the sloop Kai Malino, owned by Vic Gate, who races with the Canoe Bay Sailing Club.

Gate, in an effort to keep competitive, used to have his boat's bottom cleaned and painted twice a year.

Hartlen read how divers in Florida, California and the Gulf of Mexico make a living cleaning boat bottoms and decided Victoria should have its own bottom-bather.

He invested $6,000 in equipment and started business last June.

But unlike his counterparts in Florida, the water in which Hartlen works is frigid most of the time.

He says the cold poses no problem but it's obvious he's hardy. That bluish-red tinge to his face when he pops to the surface after a cleaning job wasn't there when he descended.

Hartlen earned his living fixing roofs until he started his new business. He now hopes to work in both extremes, plying his trade in the depths when he's not busy topside.

While keel-cleaning is particularly important to racing sailors, Hartlen says power boats and cruisers can also benefit from his service.

Heavy haul-out charges need only be met once every two years, instead of annually, if keels are scrubbed regularly. Hartlen's fee of $1.25 a foot has already appealed to about 35 boaters since he went into business.

Hartlen always uses the buddy system when he's on the job. He had diving friend Hugh Parry with him when the Times watched him in action.

One of these days Hartlen's business card may also read Hartlen and Son.

No $400,000 Promise To Library, Says Bawlf

Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf angrily denied Thursday charges that he has backed down on promises of cash aid to help in relocation of Victoria's central library.

Bawlf insisted he never promised that $400,000 would be available from the Recreation Facilities Assistance Fund for the move and accused Victoria Mayor Mike Young and Esquimalt Mayor Art Young of not telling all the facts about a discussion he had with them on the subject.

The two mayors said earlier Thursday that at a meeting last July the minister raised the possibility of the grant and had implied that the amount available would be close to $400,000.

On Wednesday Bawlf issued a news release warning the grant might be only about $150,000 under the terms of legislation governing the recreation fund.

However, the minister also emphasized that no decision has been made on the size of the grant or on any other steps that might be taken to help the library with the move.

Because of a shifting of cabinet responsibilities in December, it now will be Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis who makes the final decision, not Bawlf.

Bawlf said the root of the problem is that the legislation governing the recreation fund specifies that the province will pay up to one-third of the capital costs of suitable projects to a ceiling of $400,000.

However, rent is not covered and the Greater Victoria library board is renting its new library space from the Crown-owned B.C. Buildings Corporation.

Bawlf said he always made it clear to the mayors that they could receive the full amount of $400,000 only if they could prove $1.2 million in legitimate capital expenditures for the library move, not including the rent.

He told them there might be ways the shareable costs could be increased — for example, by changing long-term costs that were to be amortized over the period of the lease into one-time expenditures — but to the best of his knowledge the library board's only application to the recreation fund provided for legitimate capital expenditures of only about $450,000 — enough for a provincial grant of about $150,000.

Bawlf said the July meeting occurred when the mayors of the four core municipalities, the partners in the library board, complained that the move was going to be too expensive for them, despite the fact that he had already succeeded in negotiating a $100,000-a-year reduction in rent from the buildings corporation.

The mayors asked what other provincial assistance might be available, he said, and he brought up the possibility of a grant under the recreation fund.

He told them that they could get as much as $400,000, he said, but always emphasized the difficulties they would have in finding capital costs high enough to receive the maximum grant.

In suggesting that Bawlf had told them they could be reasonably sure of getting the full $400,000, the two mayors "did not relate the full facts of our discussion," he said.

"They are suggesting by omission something quite different from what I said."

Asked what the government might do if it appeared the whole library deal would fall through because of the grant problem, Bawlf answered, "I don't know what we could do. All we can do is what we are empowered by law to do."

The only other possible alternative would be for Curtis to find a funding source other than the recreation fund, he said, but he had no immediate ideas of what this might be.

Bus Criticism 'Hysterical'

Two cabinet ministers criticized local politicians after meeting Thursday with the head of the Seattle company that will operate the Gray Line bus tours in Victoria.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, who originally negotiated the sale of Gray Line to Ed Cedergren of Seattle, said it is time to put an end to "the hysterical anti-Americanism simply for partisan purposes."

And Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm, who completed the deal, said he is tired of "this bunch of garbage from some (Victoria) aldermen."

Ald. Robin Blencoe has criticized the sale of Gray Line to an American company when a local syndicate also bid.

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber also criticized sale of the Crown-owned company to Americans.

Curtis said he would do exactly the same thing if he had the decision to make over again.

"There's no question in my mind Cedergren's firm has the capacity to service the visitor industry in Victoria," he said after he, Vander Zalm, Bawlf and a number of civic officials and local tourist business operators met Cedergren.

Cedergren has just incorporated a new company — Gray Line of Victoria — and has promised it will not be subservient to the Seattle company.

Management decisions will be made in Victoria and the line will use Canadian drivers and management personnel as he promised earlier.

VCS Leaders Resign

Faced with an unworkable constitution and a $12,000 debt, the majority of the board of directors and board of governors of the Victorian Celebrations Society have resigned.

The mass resignations followed an emergency meeting Wednesday during which 10 of the 13 board members decided it would be better to abandon the society and begin again.

Former society president Helen Beirnes said today the group will meet Monday to shape a new organization to carry out the society's activities which include the annual Christmas lighting contest and the Victorian Days celebrations in May.

The new body will take over responsibility for the society's debt.

Beirnes said a constitution adopted by the society last fall has proved unworkable.

"We've spent four months trying to iron out the problems . . . but the whole thing is too complex, too awkward," she said.

"The majority of us felt we just could not continue."

Two others, Osborne's wife Glenda, and Esquimalt repesentative June Beane, were not present.

Beirnes said the society's constitution contained several anomolous features. It created a board of directors with a board of governors in control.

The governors included representatives from the four core municipalities, the Chamber of Commerce, the Visitors Information Centre, armed forces, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Downtown Victoria Association, and four members of the executive of the Celebrations Society.

While it was originally conceived the two boards would be separate, all but two of the directors were also governors, Beirnes said.

The constitution established vague duties and titles, she said. One person was called the chairman of the chairmen, a position that was largely meaningless because the person didn't have power to vote on policies or decisions taken by the governors.

"It was just impossible," said Beirnes. "We'd have a meeting and none of the members would know if they had a vote or not. It got to the point where we could get nothing done."

The group has asked lawyer Alan Emery to draft a new constitution.

Beirnes said the 240 members of the VCS will be invited to join the new society.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Can you tell me where the first public library was established in Cananda? J.B.

A. If you mean public libraries in the modern sense, then the first library service began in Toronto in 1882 following passage of the Public Libraries Act. Prior to that various institutions loaned books in Upper and Lower Canada. Some of these included the Jesuits and British army establishment at Quebec during the 19th and 18th century.

Froth Blown Off Beer Strike Hassle

The final chapter in the late, unlamented beer strike saga has been written with the dropping of breaking and entering and theft charges against Labatt's brewery employees Vic Cervinskas, 24, and Barry Granger, 37.

The two were nabbed last Aug. 22 inside the brewery with an open case of beer beside them during the bitter brewery strike-lockout.

A police spokesman said they had climbed a fence and jimmied a warehouse door. But the men said they were let in the front door by a security guard and decided not to leave as a form of protest against the company for preventing them from working.

They said the beer they were drinking came from their own kits — each employee is entitled to two dozen free beer a month.

Their trial was set for Jan. 29 but they hired a lawyer who convinced the prosecutor the matter would be best forgotten.

Cervinskas says the whole thing was blown out of proportion, nothing more than a tempest . . . in a beer mug.

$50,000 for FitzPatrick

"Can I get fired?" asked Ald. Bill McElroy when Victoria council Thursday approved severance pay for former personnel director Terry FitzPatrick.

FitzPatrick, who was fired last October without any reasons being given, will be paid $50,000.

Council also approved the payment of $1,000 to his lawyer.

FitzPatrick had been earning $30,000 a year as personnel director.

The folks who were still can't believe they heard it but Town Talk says yes indeed, you did.

You did hear that bad taste item from that inane radio announcer.

The item — about city police identifying the body of a man found in local waters — was used to lead off a newscast.

The announcer (does he comprehend anything he reads?) blithely told his listeners that the man, who had been missing for some time, had "turned up the hard way."

Doesn't the station management care?

Her father, Victoria architect Ben Levinson, said Amy has permission from the club to hold a garage sale at the family home at 2518 Orchard on Saturday.

She and a friend, Lawney Wright, both grade 7 students at Monterey, have been invited to the telethon.

That was a gutsy move by schools superintendent Allan Stables to tell off the feuding factions on the Greater Victoria school board.

Stables, caught smack in the middle of the interminable debates, arguments and hassles that seem certain to mark the entire term of office of the board, apparently decided enough was enough.

His crisp warning to trustees to smarten up or have decisions made for them by administrators, shows just how bad things are.

During shooting of the motion picture The Changeling at Royal Roads Military College, the American wardrobe mistress discovered she was short of butlers' uniforms for some scenes.

The lady, under the mistaken assumption that Government House is a theatrical costume store, brashly telephoned the residence of Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving and ordered several butlers' costumes for the next day's shooting.

The request was politely met, with a note explaining that while it was prepared to help the economy anyway it could, Government House was not really in the business of renting costumes.

Train Attached To Tunnel Light

When city council turned Thursday to the gloomy topic of the proposed new central library, Mayor Mike Young urged everyone not to give up hope.

Aldermen were despairing because of an announcement by Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf that the province isn't likely to come through with the $400,000 they said he'd earlier indicated might be available.

Bawlf said $150,000 is more likely the size of the grant to help the library move into a new building on Broughton.

"Isn't there any light at the end of the tunnel?" asked Ald. Bill McElroy.

"There is, but sometimes it gets very dim," replied Young.

"You see a light, then you find out it's a train coming through," said McElroy, who wasn't sharing the mayor's optimism.

Tax Helper? Check First

Beware of anyone knocking on your door and offering to help you file your income tax return, warns Better Business Bureau head Bill Tindall.

He's had reports of at least one individual who's going door-to-door soliciting income tax return work, and he's suspicious.

"Ordinarily, firms don't solicit business like that," he said.

Tindall said residents should ask to see identification and make sure it's identification that can be readily checked.

HOCKEY CANADA WILLING TO LET CAHA DO THE JOB

By ALEX BINKLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — Hockey Canada is prepared to stop organizing national teams to represent Canada in world hockey championships and let the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) do the job, Lou Lefaive, director of Sport Canada, said today.

But it is unlikely the CAHA would get co-operation from professional or university players in preparing teams for World Championships in Moscow this spring or a future Canada Cup, Lefaive said in an interview.

However Hockey Canada is still trying to work out an agreement with the CAHA on control of national teams, Lefaive, federal representative on Hockey Canada's board of directors, said.

Hockey Canada and the CAHA have been quarreling for more than a year over which body should represent Canada in international hockey. The dispute now boils down to CAHA refusal to accept Hockey Canada control over junior teams participating in world championships.

Lefaive said Hockey Canada was embarrassed by the junior team which represented Canada in the junior world championships in Sweden. It was knocked into second-level competition.

But many top juniors remained in Canada for a special tournament, he said. "We don't want teams over there with Maple Leafs on their sweaters when the organization behind them isn't fully committed."

The CAHA meets Feb. 3 and will, it is hoped, agree to give Hockey Canada control over world junior teams. "The CAHA is just dragging its heels," Lefaive said.

If that fails, Hockey Canada will tell Dr. Gunter Zabetski, president of the International Ice Hockey federation, to ask the CAHA to field teams for Moscow and other world championships.

It was unlikely the National Hockey League players association nor Father Bauer, who is organizing the Olympic Team for the 1980 Winter Games, would provide players for the CAHA

"Without Hockey Canada, we would right back where we were in 1964," Lefaive said. By then, senior teams were no longer good enough to win world titles for Canada and under Father Bauer's direction, a national team was organized from junior and college players.

Lefaive said Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo accepted Hockey Canada's position during a meeting Wednesday night. It was worked out earlier in the day in a Toronto meeting of Alan Eagleson, head of the player's association, Torrence Wylie, Hockey Canada chairman, Chris Lang, Hockey Canada treasurer and Lefaive.

Islander Success Defence-Oriented

By Canadian Press

The Islanders were outshot nearly 2-1 by Boston Bruins but came away with a 4-2 victory in a National Hockey League game at Boston Garden Thursday night.

"We hung tough," said Islanders coach Al Arbor after the Adams Division leading Bruins dropped their fifth game in seven. "We were not as physical as we should have been early in the game, but we picked it up in the second and third periods. We didn't get many chances, but we made the best of them.

"Our goaltending was very sharp. Our defence did a real good job in front of the net clearing some of those rebounds and taking some of those players out of there."

"It's tough to go out there three games in a row and totally outplay the other team and come up with one win," said Bruins coach Don Cherry. "One of these days, we're going to win a game we're not supposed to.

"They had three power plays and only 17 shots in the whole game. It seems like we had a power play for 50 minutes. That's very discouraging, and it's worse than going on the road and getting whomped."

In other games, Colorado Rockies defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3, New York Rangers beat Buffalo Sabres 5-4, Detroit Red Wings tied Los Angeles Kings 6-6 and Montreal Canadiens blanked Atlanta Flames, 6-0.

The Bruins, who outshot the Islanders 30-17, scored first when Wayne Cashman converted Dwight Foster's pass in the first period.

After Trottier tied the score, Eddy Westphal put New York ahead 2-1 with the only goal of the second period.

Bobby Schmautz brought Boston to within 3-2 shortly after Bossy's goal, combining with Jean Ratelle for a short-handed score.

"We played well for 55 minutes, but for five minutes spread out throughout the game, we weren't where we were supposed to be on the ice," he said.

Guy Lafleur scored two goals and set up two others to pace Montreal and regain a share of first place in the league scoring race with Trottier, each with 79 points.

The Canadiens sent 35 shots at Dan Bouchard and Rejean Lemelin in the Atlanta net, while the Flames took 14 shots at Michel Larocque in the Montreal goal. Bouchard allowed four goals in the first two periods, while Lemelin allowed two in the third.

Interlocking Play 'Full' for 1980?

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Football League could have a full interlocking schedule as early as the 1980 season, says Bob Ackles, British Columbia Lions general manager and head of the CFL general managers.

Ackles said Thursday's general managers' meeting, held in conjunction with the coach-of-the-year award, discussed the proposed interlocking schedule for nearly an hour and a half.

The proposal would have each Western Conference club playing every Eastern Conference club on a home-and-home basis, which would mean each EFC club would travel west five times and every WFC team would go east four times.

Under the current structure, each team travels for two interlocking games a season and has two interlocking games at home.

"We're generally in favor if it (the proposal) but there is some concern over the difference in travel dollars," said Ackles.

The proposal will go before club owners at the league's general meeting in Toronto, Feb. 13-15. Ackles said if the problems are ironed out of the plan, it could be implemented in the 1980 schedule. But, he said, 1981 is a more realistic target.

In the league's annual territoriaL exemption selections Thursday, Canadian universities produced 11 of the 18 players protected by the nine clubs.

Grey Cup champion Edmonton Eskimos named two players from the University of Alberta Golden Bears, wide receiver and kicker Marco Cyncar and wingback Kerry O'Conner.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers protected University of Manitoba Bisons Bill Yaworsky, a defensive end, and Rick Chernoff, a tight end.

Calgary Stampeders, with three choices because of a late-season trade with Toronto which netted them the Argonauts second pick, went to American schools for all three players.

Saskatchewan Roughriders went to the University of the Pacific for defensive tackle Al Johns and took Tim Hook, a starting guard from the University of Montana.

Roar Caused By Approval

EDMONTON (CP) — When Jack Gotta's name came out of the envelope at Thursday's Canadian Football League coach-of-the-year dinner, the roar from delegates, press and guests was one of approval, but not surprise.

Gotta, who in two seasons lifted the Calgary Stampeders from four-time Western Football Conference cellar-dwellers to WFC finalists in 1978, was the favorite to take the Annis Stukus Trophy for an unprecedented third time.

The only other front-runner in the vote, conducted by the Football Writers of Canada, was Hugh Campbell of Edmonton Eskimos. Campbell has been in the CFL only two seasons and gone to the Grey Cup both times, winning it last year.

Along with the trophy, Gotta received a watch from the Edmonton Eskimos Alumni Association, who organize the yearly award, and $5,000, which he said he will divide with his staff.

Gotta took the award in 1972 and 1973 while with the Ottawa Rough Riders, becoming the first coach ever to win the trophy two consecutive years. His third win makes him the first coach to win the award with two different clubs.

He said the prestige of individual awards trickles down and enhances the reputation of the club as a whole.

"When Calgary comes into different cities now I think that people are going to say, hey I think they've got a chance of beating the team."

It would not have been the case this time last year, after the Stampeders finished their fourth consecutive year in last place in the WFC standings with a 4-12 record. The previous year they had won two games and tied two.

Gotta came out of limbo from his three-year stint with the World Football Association to become coach and general manager in 1977, when the club was plagued all season by injuries to key players.

Troubled relatively little by injuries in 1978, Gotta's Stampeders finished with a 9-4-3 season record, finishing behind the first-place Eskimos. They routed Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the WFC semi-final but fell to the Eskimos in the conference championship.

HOCKEY VETERANS LAUNCH TOURNEY

Action opened this morning in the third annual Western Canada Oldtimers hockey tournament at seven Greater Victoria arenas.

Ice surfaces at Memorial Arena, Esquimalt Sports Centre, Juan de Fuca Recreational Centre, Pearkes Arena, Oak Bay Recreation Centre, Panorma Leisure Centre and the Racquet Club of Victoria will all be used at different times during the competition, which continues Saturday and winds up Sunday.

A total of 68 teams are competing in the event, in which all finals are scheduled at Memorial Arena, starting at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Bruins Stage Winning Surge

By Canadian Press

New Westminster Bruins scored three goals with just over one minute left in the game to defeat Medicine Hat Tigers 7-5 in a Western Hockey League game Thursday night.

In Thursday's only other contest, Franco Disciglio scored at 16:47 of the third period to lift Edmonton Oil Kings to a 4-4 tie with Brandon Wheat Kings.

Scott McLeod netted the tying goal, his second of the night, at 18:56 of the third period with the Bruins playing with a two-man advantage — a penalty to Medicine Hat's Brian Keates and pulling goalie Tom Semenchuk for an extra attacker.

Kent Reardon scored the go-ahead goal 45 seconds later and Boris Fistric netted the insurance marker at 19:53.

Bitter Weather Favored Aaron

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The players fought for balance and leaned into the howling winds that whipped off the Pacific and lashed the tees and greens jutting on headlands over the white-capped surf.

They talked not of birdies and pars but of survival.

"It was actually frightening," said 47-year-old Billy Casper, his portly bulk bundled under two sweaters and a windbreaker.

But Tommy Aaron said nothing at all. He just smiled shyly.

Aaron, a former Masters champion who had to qualify to get in this event, fought the winds — estimated by one tournament official at 50 miles an hour in gusts — and the biting cold for a three-under-par 69 that made him a two-shot leader after Thursday's first round of the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open golf tournament.

"I was just trying to get in," said the 41-year-old Aaron, who hasn't won since the 1973 Masters at Augusta, Ga. "I've never thought of myself as a good cold weather player, but," and he smiled again, "I guess you don't think about that when you're shooting 69."

The wind was fierce.

It actually plucked the flagsticks from the cups on three holes. Several portable toilets were blown over.

The two Canadians entered found themselves in the middle of the pack after the first round. Dave Barr of Kelowna shot a 75, while Jim Nelford of Burnaby finished with a 77.

Another Win For Annemarie

SCHRUNS, Austria (AP) — Annemarie Moser-Proell of Austria today won her fifth World Cup downhill ski race in a row, 2.35 seconds ahead of Cindy Nelson of the United States.

Moser-Proell picked up no World Cup points for the achievement, because only three races count. But she won 25 points for winning the combined, which is awarded to the best over-all performance in both downhill and slalom.

Her new World Cup total is 180 points.

Asked to explain her downhill supremacy, Moser-Proell said: "I have a lot of self-confidence, I don't think that anything can happen to me on a downhill trail."

Moser-Proell's five downhill victories in a row matched that of Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden, the defending men's World Cup holder, who had won five consecutive giant slaloms this season.

Bright To Coach

EDMONTON (CP) — Former Canadian Football League rushing star Johnny Bright has been named head coach of Edmonton Wildcats of the Prairie Junior Football Conference. He replaces Jim Lazaruk who stepped down at the end of last season. Bright, 46, was among the top ball carriers in the CFL until he retired from Edmonton Eskimos in 1965.

BAYS OPEN CHASE AGAINST CALGARY

Lockerby of Sudbury, Ont., and Richmond Colts squared off this afternoon in the opening game of the third annual Oakleaf Classic high school boys' basketball tournament at Oak Bay High.

In other openers tonight, Mt. Douglas Rams take on Vancouver City College at 5, Nanaimo Islanders tackle Brookfield of Ottawa at 7 and the host Oak Bay Bays meet Viscount Bennett of Calgary at 9.

Action continues Saturday at Oak Bay High starting at 3 p.m. and resumes at 9 a.m. Sunday at UVic's McKinnon Gym. The final is scheduled for 3 p.m.

AT 18, WAYNE GRETZKY... ...IS A BLAZING STAR

Not Your Average Teen-ager

EDMONTON (CP) — Wayne Gretzky turned 18 today, a watershed for the average teen-ager. But Gretzky is about as average as Prince Charles.

Gretzky, who gave up three years of junior eligibility to sign a multi-million-dollar, personal-services contract with Nelson Skalbania, has been touted as the best hockey prospect since Bobby Orr, since Guy Lafleur — since anyone.

Not since Orr has a professional hockey player received as much publicity in his rookie season.

At an age when most hockey players still wrestle with the possibility of not reaching their sophomore year in junior, Gretzky had to decide whether to play out his years with Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League or jump to the Skalbania's Indianapolis Racers of the World Hockey Assocation.

From all reports, Gretzky, the phenomenon from Brantford, Ont., who set a rookie record with 182 points in his only year with the Greyhounds, has not only adjusted but flourished.

Starting with the Racers and now with Edmonton Oilers, he has 46 points on 23 goals and 23 assists, ninth best in the WHA.

Gretzky and two other Racers were auctioned to the Oilers last fall as Skalbania struggled to save his floundering franchise. Gretzky's departure hastened the end of the Racers, who disbanded shortly after.

Even before moving to Edmonton, Gretzky was well-travelled.

His scoring ability and uncanny puck sense had made him a national figure while playing minor hockey in Brantford. He left home at 14 on his parents' advice to play junior "B" in Toronto. His hockey prowess had stopped developing and he had become the subject of too much attention and pressure in his Southern Ontario home town.

"Staying four years in junior hockey would've been hard for me," he said. "It's not that I wouldn't have learned anything in junior. I would've learned an awful lot. But moving on, I've learned a lot quicker."

Like most teen-agers, Gretzky admits some insecurity. He is aware of his hockey gift but uncertain that it won't leave him one morning.

"Maybe that's why I ended up doing so well. You know, even when I was 10 years old (after) five years on the same team . . . when I went to training camp I still had thoughts of not making the team.

Gordie Howe, who with son Mark played on a line with Gretzky on the WHA all-stars, is a fan.

Said Howe: "It scares me how good he could become."

Gretzky will celebrate his birthday on the ice, tilting against Cincinnati Stingers. The Oiler front office has built the evening around his birthday.

Braves Romp Past Runners

John Franks pumped in 16 points Thursday to help Belmont Braves to an 84-41 victory over visiting Reynolds Roadrunners in a Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League game.

The win boosted Braves to a 4-1 season record and left Roadrunners mired at 0-6.

In a Greater Victoria High School Girls' League game, Mt. Douglas Ramblers dropped visiting Victoria Tigers, 59-33.

Diana Thornton led Ramblers with 15 points, one more than the total contributed by clubmate Adrian Mason. Janet Lorimer led Tigers with 17.

At Courtenay Thursday, Parkland Panthers of Victoria, propelled by Quinn Groenhyde's 33-point outburst, reached the semifinals of the annual Georges Vanier Towhees high school boys' tournament by downing Campbell River 76-60.

In other games, Burnaby North edged Cowichan Thunderbirds 66-64, Towhees knocked off Semiahmoo of White Rock 73-35 and Princess Margaret posted a 62-51 decision over Lord Byng of Vancouver.

Highland Re-Zoning Would Kill Potential

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Eventually, there will be a day of reckoning and it's about time Victorians took a good hard look at the way in which they want to live . . . Unrestricted growth causes a multitude of servicing and pollution problems that overshadow by far any gains made by providing a broader tax base and more jobs . . . It generally only benefits the quick-buck developers . . . In these days of increasing gasoline prices, having a greenbelt zone in proximity to the capital city seems desirable . . . The Highland Land District, encompassing some 15,000 acres, is just such an area . . . A bye-law amendment currently before the Capital Regional District would change two Highland areas from rural to residential zoning and decrease the minimum lot size from 45 to 10 acres . . . Recreational aspects of greenbelt and parkland areas in the Highlands will be lost if the amendment passes because of increased road-building and population density . . . It would also preclude establishment of a trail system, supported by the Western Community Settlement Plan, to provide access to scenic areas of the Highlands . . . Growth should be limited now and public recreational access to the lakes, viewpoints and other beauty spots in this area should be maximized . . . Make your feelings known by attending a public hearing scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre, 1767 Old Island Highway . . . Further information may be obtained by telephoning The Greater Victoria Environmental Centre at 388-5317.

Orr, Hickey Notch Top Fivepin Tallies

Strong middle games helped boost Sharon Orr and Fred Hickey into the fivepin winners' circle during the 14th week of competition in the 16th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Sharon captured the women's award with a 270-294-281 — 795 series while Fred earned men's laurels with a 270-326-297 — 893 series.

Trios Trimmed

Fuller Lake Flyers, sparked by a three-goal effort from Brett Malli, posted a 6-2 South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League victory over Oak Bay Trios in a Patterson Division game Thursday at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

PART OF NEW UVIC OUTDOOR PROGRAM

Rock Climbing Full of Challenges

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Everyone feels like climbing the walls at times, among them George Willig, the toymaker who scaled the 110-storey World Trade Centre in New York in the spring of 1977.

Willig wound up with load of press clippings and a fine of one cent for every floor he climbed, but he's not the only honest-to-goodness wall-scaler.

Window washers aside, three students at UVic did the same thing last fall and it got them jobs as instructors in the university's outdoor recreation program.

The UVic wall climbers are John Simpson, 18, John Molnar, 19, and Mike Curran, 19, all of Victoria and all experienced in the sport of rock climbing.

"They showed up in my office one day and said they'd been climbing the outside walls of the residence buildings for practice," athletic director Mike Elcock related. "They inferred this wasn't challenging enough, so I suggested they try the walls of the library building.

"When Trevor Matthews (vice-president of administration at UVic) found out what I'd suggested, he nearly had a fit," Elcock chuckled.

That put an end to the building climbs but Elcock and Wayne Pealo, co-ordinator of recreation and intramurals, hired the three to instruct five four-hour sessions in introductory rock climbing starting Saturday as part of the school's outdoor program that is open to the public.

Despite their youth, Simpson, Curran and Molnar are well qualified. They belong to the Alpine Club of Canada (there are 350 members in Victoria), have conducted climbing sessions at the YM-YWCA and instructed in climbing and survival for mountain operations units of the Canadian and Australian armed forces at Banff in 1977.

"Rock climbing isn't as dangerous as many people think," Simpson pointed out. "It's just that major climbs and accidents seem to get all the publicity. The main thing is to know your limits."

Safety, naturally, will be a major topic in the UVic climbing courses. You just don't decide to scale a rock — or a wall — like a fly without adequate safety gear like ropes, harness and hardware.

Climbing is often done in groups, preferably with two climbers to a rope for belaying, in which one person anchors the rope from above while the other climbs.

Good belaying can be worth your life, as Molnar discovered when he lost his grip on loose, mossy rock nearly 200 feet up Mount Wells in the Goldstream area.

"There were a lot of ledges and overhangs," Molnar recalled. "I fell from one of the overhangs but somehow missed the others. I was falling headfirst and my thoughts were on the trees below coming up at me. I had enough time to realize I was in a bad situation and to yell."

Belaying for Molnar was another Victorian, Steve McConnell, who halted his fall after about 30 feet, leaving Molnar dangling safely in his harness in midair.

According to Simpson, McConnell once nearly reached the end of his rope, figuratively and literally, while climbing near Squamish. He dove 110 feet before his belayer stopped him — five feet from the ground.

It would have been the end, Simpson said, if McConnell's belayer hadn't had the presence of mind to crank in about 10 feet of loose rope while he was falling. As it was, he came out of it with nothing worse than some scrapes and an ankle sprain, Molnar added.

As you might suspect, conditioning is important. Chin-ups, pull-ups and, yes, wall climbing are good ways to get into shape, although UVic officials would just as soon you stay off their buildings. A wall inside the old gym has been set aside for practice.

Climbing requires a strong grip, of course, and another favorite exercise is the finger-tip pull-up where you grasp the top of a door frame with your finger-tips and pull yourself off the floor.

The sport is full of personal challenges. As Curran explained: "You find out about your sense of fear and how to overcome it.".

Simpson once spent two hours motionless halfway up the face of a 600-foot wall on the Squamish Chief, a well-known rock north of Vancouver, getting up the nerve to continue. He did.

"It would have been harder to come down," he said.

Information on the rock climbing sessions is available at the UVic sports and recreation office in the McKinnon Building or by phoning 477-6911, local 4355, or 477-6918 after 10 p.m. and weekends.

Woman Who Sailed World Commodore of Boat Show

AROUND OUR SHORES

One of the most gutsy women sailors in the world will be honorary commodore of the 1979 Vancouver International Boat Show, which gets under way next Friday at the Pacific National Exhibition.

She's Naomi James, who set sail from the British port of Dartmouth on Sept. 9, 1977 to sail single-handed around the world, returning on June 8, 1978, completing her voyage in 271 days, 19 hours and 20 minutes.

Not only did she become the first woman to sail single-handed around the world; she also toppled the previous record, set by Sir Francis Chichester in 1967.

At one point, Naomoi had not been heard from for 43 days. She arrived in Cape Town on Nov. 19 with the radio and self-steering gear of her 53-foot sloop Express Crusader damaged by towering seas that had swept 25 to 30 feet high over the boat.

Her time as a yacht charter cook in 1975 and her husband Robert's whole-hearted support must certainly have helped her get ready for the big adventure of her life.

He's sailed around the world twice himself. In 1973-1974 he crewed aboard the Second Life and in 1977-1978 skippered the boat Great Britain II.

On the first day of the boat show Naomi will host a women-only luncheon at noon in the Dogwood Room on the PNE grounds for members of the media, which should be a dandy for women reporters who like "rag-hailing" in their spare time.

On opening day, named Women's Day, the first 1,000 women will receive special gifts.

It is estimated that products displayed by more than 250 dealers have a total value of more than $10 million.

The show runs through to Sunday, Feb. 11. It will be open weekdays from 6 to 10:30 p.m. On Saturdays the times are 1 to 10:30 p.m. and Sundays, 1 to 6 p.m.

There will be a $3 admittance fee for grown-ups while senior citizens and children from five to 15 years of age will be able to get in for $1.

A new sailing organization is in the process of being born in Saanich. Henry Niezen, commodore of the Saanich Peninsula Sailing Association, and Gord Lawless, fleet captain of the University of Victoria Sailing Club, are combining forces to get the thing off the ground.

They hope to form a Saanich branch of the association and have approached Saanich council for help.

The idea is to be allowed to use a part of the Gyro Park in Cadboro Bay, between the tennis court and the seawall, to build an enclosure for dinghies.

Gord explains that the only dinghy racing in this area is provided by the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, and is too expensive for many dinghy enthusiasts. The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, while more reasonable in its fees, is not too keen on joining new members who are not in the armed forces, Gord says.

At present, the university sails out of the Oak Bay Marina but Gord says the spot is not too good for beginners because of the heavy boat traffic and deep water.

He's also hoping to get some kind of government grant to employ students to work on the enclosure this summer.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association has another two arond-the-buoys races scheduled for Sunday, starting in waters off Oak Bay Marina at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Many of the boats taking part were in RVYY's long-distance race last Sunday. The club's protest committee still has to rule on some of the protests that came out of that race so final results are not yet available.

Sixteen boats of the club's Cal 20 fleet competed in an around-the-buoys race on Sunday with Mike Ziegler's Sea Fever going over the finish line in first place. After her came Peter Cox's Kittiwake, Blair Humphrey's Ookpik, Harry Marshall's Tongariro, Peter Harrison's Sunbeam and Frank Cushion's Por Gusto.

* * *

Depending on water levels, members of the Victoria Canoe Club will paddle on either the Sooke of Cowichan Rivers this coming Sunday. If you want details of time, place, what-have-you, give Dave Suttill a ring at 384-3588.

Laker Hands Chilled

By Canadian Press

Los Angeles Lakers' fears that their hot hands might catch a chill in the wintery Midwest turned out to be well founded Thursday night.

The Lakers, who set a National Basketball Association record for field-goal shooting in a rout of New York Knicks on Tuesday, were virtually powerless against Detroit Pistons.

The Pistons, who appear to be growing accustomed to the chilly conditions on their court inside the Silverdome, romped to a 135-100 victory as Lakers' coach Jerry West watched in disbelief.

"The Pistons played a great game and it was the worst one the Lakers have played for me in my three years of coaching them," West moaned. "We couldn't pass, we couldn't defend, we couldn't shoot and, above all, we couldn't catch them. We got worse as the game went on."

Elsewhere Thursday, Seattle SuperSonics edged Atlanta Hawks 100-98 and Portland Trail Blazers downed Golden State Warriors 108-103.

Guard Gus Williams scored 28 points to pace Seattle to its fourth consecutive victory and sixth in a row on the road. Williams's last three points were crucial. He hit a 15-foot shot with 28 seconds remaining to give the Sonics a 99-98 lead and then with seven seconds left, hit one of two free throws to build the two-point lead.

A jump-shot by Atlanta's Armand Hill at the buzzer was on target and would have sent the game into overtime, but the officials ruled that time ran out before the ball left Hill's hand. Atlanta now has lost three straight.

Lionel Hollins scored 22 points, including 10 in the final period, to spark Portland to the win that put the Trail Blazers into a three-way tie with Golden State for fourth place in the Pacific Division.

Dane Wins Sailing Crown

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Danish skipper Lasse Hjortnaes took the world Laser sailing championship away from United States domination Friday.

All the previous world Laser championships had been won by American yachtsmen. Andrew Menkart, the young American who won the world youth sailing championship in December, finished third in this series.

Friday's race was won by Andrew Hodder of Australia. Terry Neilson of Vancouver was sixth in the race, but the top Canadian performance for the nine-race series was Lawrence Lemieux of Edmonton who placed 24th.

ASHE EXPLAINS TOURNEY HOPES

MIAMI (AP) — Arthur Ashe, 35, says he hopes to play top tournament tennis for at least two more years.

"I could have hung it up quite a while ago and said, 'To heck with it,' " the former Wimbledon and U.S. Open titleholder said, "but I feel fine and I think I can make a go of it for at least two years more. After that, I will remain in tennis in some capacity."

NOW APPROACHING: THE GREAT WEST CONNECTION

Now the West is one ... as Pacific Western and Transair come together to make travelling quicker and easier on a broader scale. Now, all four Western provinces, the Northwest Territories and the Yukon are part and parcel of The Great West Connection.

Never in the history of the West have air carriers ventured so far to connect with so much. Never has any air carrier made it simpler for people to hug, kiss and shake hands in so many places ... from Winnipeg to Victoria, and from Seattle to Inuvik. Starting up February 4th.

Before the Judge

A preliminary hearing into charges of attempted murder and assault with intent to wound, maim or disfigure an 83-year-old woman began in provincial court Thursday before Judge Harold Alder but is expected to take more than the scheduled two days.

They were charged after Julia Knoll, 553 Raynor, was attacked in her home Dec. 3.

* * *

Barrie Paul Dale, 30, of 1322 Ivy Place, and Katherine Barbara Sharpe, 17, of Vancouver, were charged with possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking.

Judge William Ostler released both on their own recognizance, Dale on $5,000 with one or two sureties and Sharpe on $1,000.

Defence lawyer Robin Dalziel elected trial by judge without jury on Dale's behalf while defence lawyer Peter Freeman reserved election on Sharpe's behalf.

Both were remanded to next Thursday.

* * *

A 30-year-old man who pleaded guilty to his third marijuana conviction was fined $350 by Ostler.

Kenneth Gordon France, who gave addresses of Abbotsford and Kelowna, pleaded guilty to having marijuana in his possession Jan. 19 in Esquimalt.

Crown counsel Martha McNeely said France was stopped in his vehicle near the Dockyard Recreation Association and a quantity of marijuana cigarettes fell out of his pockets during questioning by police.

McNeely said France was convicted of the same offence Nov. 19, 1978, in Brandon and Oct. 21, 1977, in Halifax and was fined $100 and $50, respectively.

Before imposing the fine, Ostler said France was embarking on a "steady course of defiance of the law."

* * *

An 18-year-old who Ostler said has tested the judicial system as much as he can was given a warning and a suspended sentence.

Rico Ricardo Landucci, 658 Marlisa, was found guilty of breaking and entering following a trial Dec. 27 and was remanded to Thursday for a pre-sentence report.

Evidence indicated the break-in occurred July 30 at 3630 Harriet, a residence of a relative of Landucci's, and a coin was found in the youth's possession.

Defence lawyer David Hatter conceded the report indicated Landucci was immature, used marijuana and had bad associates and that his mother had described him as hyperactive and mouthy before he recently improved.

However, Hatter said his client had a long-range goal of taking a cooking course at Camosun College. He started the 10-month program three weeks ago and is doing reasonably well.

"You can only go so far with this type of thing," Ostler warned before sentencing.

The judge also ordered Landucci to perform 100 hours of community service work and to obey a 9:30 p.m. curfew for the first three months of his probation.

* * *

Jack Michael Martin, 4324 Dieppe, also was placed on a further six months' probation after Ostler learned he was convicted March 22, 1978, in Toronto for breaking and entering and given a one-day jail sentence and placed on a year's probation.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said the incident happened about 12:45 a.m., Dec. 22, in Colwood. Mulligan said Martin and the owner of the car were in the vehicle when the owner ordered Martin out. When Martin refused, Mulligan said, the owner got out and went to the passenger side to open the door. Martin locked all the doors while the owner was walking around his car and drove off.

Martin said the events happened during the Christmas season and they had been drinking. He said he felt the owner was not in any condition to drive and first asked him to leave the vehicle.

* * *

Grieving Parents Seek Gov't Help

The parents of the woman whose remains were discovered in an abandoned tomb excavation in Egypt has asked the federal government for help in returning her remains to B.C. for burial.

A friend of the family said Thursday the parents of Carol Anita Harold, 35, have sent money to Cairo through the external affairs department for the air fare. The friend said the couple is still too distraught to talk about their daughter.

He said Carl and Sanni Harold learned of their daughter's death Monday at their home in Esquimalt.

The remains of their daughter were found in an abandoned excavation outside the tomb of King Tutankhamun.

She was an enthusiastic archeologist and had gone out alone in December, 1976, from her hotel room.

She never returned and extensive searches of the area failed to find any trace of her.

An Egyptian inquiry into the death showed that she had fallen into the excavation outside the tomb and had been unable to climb out of the six-metre hole. A note was discovered at the site in which she had written that she could do nothing to save her own life.

Lottery Cash To Assist Saanich Project

The Saanich Historical Artifacts Society has received a $110,000 lottery grant to bring all its projects together, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said Thursday.

The grant will cover the cost of building a 7,500-square foot storage and warehouse and two adjoining workshops on the society's 23-acre property off the Pat Bay Highway.

The society has thousands of artifacts stored throughout the area.

With the new building, the group will be able to bring the artifacts together, restore them and provide security.

Mini-World Project Still in the Works

A proposal to build a multi-million dollar mini-world complex in Victoria is far from dead despite the provincial government's refusal to lease property at St. Ann's Academy.

Victoria businessman George Devlin, a partner in the scheme, said Thursday other sites are being sought with the assistance of the B.C. Building Corporation and Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

Last month Curtis rejected the use of the St. Ann's property for the project.

Devlin said his English partner, Peter Kellard of KLF House in Dorset, will come to Victoria in early February to discuss the proposal with Curtis and civic officials.

"It (the project) isn't dead by a long shot," Devlin said.

He said the loss of St. Ann's site has delayed construction of the tourist attraction — the biggest ever contemplated on southern Vancouver Island — by at least one year and maybe two.

He had originally hoped to open by 1980.

Devlin, who owns the Royal Albert Miniature World in The Empress, said the attraction would involve English and Canadian landmarks recreated in the form of one-twenty-fourth scale models.

A Newcomer With Heart

A heart-screening program that sets up shop at some convenient location and takes cardiograms of people free?

Or a group of women called The Busy Hands that sew and design clothing for under-privileged children.

Carol-Ann Jenkins (Ann to everyone who knows her) has first-hand knowledge of all three.

She was a volunteer worker with WOK and with the heart-screening program during the years she and her husband, Edward, lived in Hawaii following his retirement from the U.S. air force.

And she worked for a time with The Busy Hands after they returned to Santa Rosa, Calif.

The WOK auxiliary was connected with Kula Sanitorium on the island of Maui, she said.

"Each week we placed fresh flowers at the bedsides of the very ill and in wards of those who were ambulatory.

"We visited with them, too, and I became particularly interested and involved with those who were considered slightly disturbed."

WOK also maintained a thrift shop.

"We had sales once a week and when I left Hawaii they were selling all sorts of household items, including furniture and stoves as well as clothing for every member of a family, from babies to grandparents."

Funds were used to provide necessary furnishings when new rooms were opened at the sanitorium and to purchase much-needed medical equipment not included in annual budgets.

The heart program was another fine volunteer effort, Mrs. Jenkins says.

"Particularly for those who could not afford to pay a high fee for such a service."

If a cardiogram showed a person needed further treatment, a letter was immediately sent out explaining the findings.

She says The Busy Hands Group in California does beautiful work.

In fact, they were so good, she couldn't sew well enough to meet their professional standards. She acted as their publicity chairman.

Last year, while she held that position, the group won a prestigious Community Service Award.

That was just before the Jenkins decided to move to Canada and make their home in Victoria.

She was born and educated in Winnipeg. Following her marriage, she lived in the U.S., including Alaska and Hawaii, as well as Japan because her husband moved around with the air force.

After he retired they intended to live on Maui for the rest of their lives.

Her husband took up painting as a hobby, with special interest in seascapes, and Ann started her voluntary work with WOK and the heart-screening program.

Loss of a son out there, under tragic circumstances, soured those retirement plans and sent them back to California where they stayed about four years.

Then, in 1978, disillusioned with the political situation there, they made up their minds to come to Canada.

"My husband said I had lived in his country for most of our married life and now we should spend some time in my country," Mrs. Jenkins explains.

"We did look around a bit but actually it didn't take us long to decide Victoria was the place to make our home."

Carol-Ann Jenkins: ready to volunteer

Now they are comfortably settled in an apartment at 1360 Esquimalt Road.

He has a downtown studio (not open to the public) where he is working on oils, etchings and with watercolors for a showing possibly next year.

Ann, of course, is looking for volunteer work but not just any kind.

"It's a thought that has been in my mind for some time. I've had three children of my own. I have two grandchildren and I know how young folk respond to love and affectionate understanding."

With this in mind, she has been working on an alphabet that features the old way of teaching and illustrating the hard and soft sounds of the letters.

She has also been saving pictures of animals from newspapers and periodicals that she believes would interest physically handicapped children in making up scrapbooks under her supervision.

"I want to read to them, talk to them, encourage them. I want to act as a grandmother image . . . in fact, I wouldn't mind if they called me their grandmother."

It could be in a small group, or in a hospital where there is need for somebody to relieve regular staff.

"I believe that through my love for children and young folk I have something to offer physically handicapped youngsters," she says. "And I'm eager to find a place where I can fit in as a volunteer."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: BURNING is upset because her only son is going to assume his wife's maiden name.

BURNING says, "If he doesn't carry on the family name, it will be the end of the family line."

Changing one's name doesn't constitute the end of the line. Genes alone determine a line. Thus a natural child (daughters included) can continue a line, regardless of the married name.

Why don't we emulate the Spanish and use the mother's maiden name as well as the father's?

That seems to be the ideal solution, don't you agree? — LATINO

DEAR LATINO: Si! But if only one name is used to carry on the family name, it would seem more logical to use the mother's. One can be absolutely certain who the child's mother is. But sometimes there's a question about who the father is.

DEAR ABBY: Why do you presume that "to be alone at Christmas is sad beyond measure"?

There are many of us out here who yearn to be alone at Christmas. I am one of them. I spent most of my life doing what everyone expected of me rather than doing what I wanted to do.

I've been alone 25 years, and have used that time imaginatively and creatively. Being alone at Christmas certainly beats the greedy grab for presents and the gobbling of food like a bunch of pigs at a trough.

I think if more of us spent more time alone, we might have a more sane populace than we now have.

One could spend the day alone thanking the creator for all the blessings received during the past year. Inviting someone to share Christmas with you in order to spare him or her the pain of being alone doesn't mean anything. It's how we treat those around us on all the other days that counts. — CREATIVE SOLITUDE

DEAR CREATIVE: I appreciate your view. Being alone by choice is one thing. But being alone because not a living soul has thought to include you (particularly on a holiday that's traditionally merry) is something else.

DEAR ABBY: Now that I am a parent myself I realize that parents aren't perfect. They may mean well, but they make mistakes.

For example, I am one of four daughters. We were all overprotected, and never allowed to make our own decisions or do our own talking.

I can still remember that, when I was 16, my mother took me to our family doctor for my first internal examination. She held my hand as we went into the examination room and told the doctor that she wanted to stay with me during the examination. Thank God he said no!

Abby, in that doctor's office was the first time in my life I actually had a chance to talk freely and answer questions myself.

I believe we should honor our fathers and mothers, but there sould be some rules for parents, too. They shouldn't raise their children as though they are their precious property. They should allow them to grow up in preparation to face the world alone, because one day they will be put to the test. — STRUGGLING

HUNGER GROWS WORSE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hunger will grow worse in the poorest countries even though the world produces enough food for everyone, says the executive director of the World Food Council.

"Even when food supplies over-all are adequate, it is estimated that over 400 million people in the low income countries are chronically hungry and malnourished," Maurice Williams said.

Williams said the problem is concentrated in the world's 40 poorest countries, but did not name them. His organization, with headquarters in Rome, represents 36 countries including the United States and the Soviet Union.

He said developing countries imported 52 million tons of food in 1977, and predicted that by 1990 the total will be up to 145 million tons.

"Poorer countries will simply not be able to pay commercially for their mounting food costs, and aid on such a massive scale appears unlikely," he said.

2,000 Canadians Lose Sight Each Year

REGINA (CP) — About 2,000 Canadians are losing their eyesight each year to industrial and home accidents and curable eye diseases, says Otto Huber, local district administrator of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB).

With attention to eye safety, regular check-ups and early treatment, more than half of all blindness could be prevented, he said in an interview, promoting the upcoming White Cane Week, Feb. 4-10.

G. J. Collrin, national president of the Canadian Council of the Blind, said White Cane Week, sponsored by the council and the CNIB, has gained strength and recongition since its inception in 1946 but there are still myths and fears about blindness.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I'm a 16-year-old girl who's the best of friends with a guy of 19. We enjoy the same sports and music, talk about our problems at school and walk home together. I would like us to be better than friends. He says he likes me but I think he means as friends. Please give advice on how to go about being more than just friends.

ANSWER: My advice is to carry on exactly as you are now. Sharing common interests, talking to each other about the things that concern you, and just enjoying each other's company is a perfect way to begin a relationship that might last and grow in depth.

As the trust between you develops, it may be possible for you to talk with him about your relationship. He may also want to talk with you about his feelings.

If you are both wanting the same thing then somehow I am sure that you will be able to find a way to let each other know. But from your description it does sound as if you have the beginnings of a good relationship already.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I'm a 17-year-old girl with a big problem. I was born with a speech and hearing problem so I have been to about six different schools. Because of this I have found it hard to meet friends. I do have friends but not close ones. My problem is they all have boy friends except me.

I was seeing a man who was quite a bit older and I felt I was being used. I would like to know if there are any groups or organizations I could join where I would meet some people I could do the things I enjoy — roller skating, dancing, bowling and sports. I feel very alone and depressed.

ANSWER: It is difficult to decide whether your problem is because of your handicap or because you have never been in any one school long enough to make good friends. School friendships tend to become closed groups which resist the entry of any new person. When a physical handicap is added, it makes it even harder for you because the other kids may fear you do not understand or that they cannot understand you.

Sometimes, I'm sure, you feel the kids may be cruel, but keep on giving them a chance to get to know you. Perhaps if you organized a party and invited the others this would show that you want to become a part of the group.

Do not make friends only with others who are handicapped. You have to live in the real world and learn to cope with its problems.

There are young people's groups in churches which welcome newcomers. Since you enjoy sports, you might join a ski club or recreation group organized by the recreation and parks department of your own municipality.

I think you are already aware that sex is not the best basis for forming friendships. You seem to have all the basics required for friendship but, remember, loneliness and depression will make you feel sorry for yourself and that discourages others from wanting to be with you.

Try talking to your minister or priest or to your school counsellor.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am 19 and I have a boy friend who is 23. I really love him and he keeps saying that he loves me but I don't really think he means it. Sometimes he treats me like an animal. He puts me down in front of his friends.

I'm going out with other guys, too, but he doesn't seem to mind at all. He says it's natural for me to go out with some other people you like.

Now I want to break up with him but he won't let me go. He won't listen and still wants me.

ANSWER: You already know that you must get your freedom by refusing to see this man. You are acting like poison on each other and the relationship is bad for you both.

You should also ask yourself if there is something self-torturing about the quality of the love you have for him. I think you have an emotional entanglement that you can't get out of because you are afraid of starting all over again with a new person.

GOOD TRAP IN GARDEN

Years ago when my grandfather used to trap possums, coons and rabbits and serve them up as dinners, he always caught the varmints in a simple box trap made from a few boards and a handful of nails.

It was only natural — after rabbits started pulling heavy raids on my garden a few years back — for me to think of grandfather's trap. I knew I could whip together several of the bunny catchers from scrap materials in no time.

The trap you see illustrated is a hollow box about two feet long. The four main boards are one-by-six's nailed together with the top and bottom boards overlapping the two sides. This makes the box's inside dimension about four inches by 5½ inches tall — just right for a rabbit. Use longer and wider boards if you're going after larger animals, but try to keep your traps a fairly good fit for whatever you want to catch (so the varmints can't squeeze past the trigger once they're inside).

The principle of the triggering mechanism is very simple: the centre post is nothing but a pivot for the long rod across the top, which is connected with twine to a raisable door on one end and a trip bar on the other.

The bar fits loosely (very loosely — you don't want it to bind) through a hole in the box's top and is notched to catch on the underside of that hole. Once set in this manner, the weight of the door (which is heavier than the trip bar) will hold the notched stick in place until a rabbit enters the trap and nudges against the trigger, thereby disengaging it and allowing the door to fall.

Since varmints are more likely to enter objects they can see all the way through, the back end of the box is covered with strong but open mesh hardware cloth. Whatever animal you're trying to catch is further enticed into the trap by baiting the trip bar with food or scent the species is known to like.

A few hints:

— Make sure your trip bar is positioned with the notch facing forward (so Mr. Bunny will disengage it when he bumps into the stick).

— Cut the trigger so long that it clears the bottom of the trap by no more than an inch ((you don't want the rabbit to crawl under the bar and miss it entirely).

— You'll find the trip works best if you put it outsiide to weather away most of its human smell for a few weeks after you build it and before you set it (while wearing gloves) for the very first time.

Once you catch a pesky critter, you either can serve him for dinner, or let him loose — well away from your vegetable patch.

Proper Backpack Makes Trip Easier

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

If you are planning to join the backpack brigade this summer, now is the time to prepare yourself. It's really important to make sure that you have a proper fit and a frame that's going to hold out for the duration of your trip. Mine quit on me between France and England recently and I was left holding the bag.

It's hard to travel free and easy when, all of a sudden, you find you need eight extra hands to keep yourself together. Here are some tips — learned the hard way — on getting the right pack for you.

The first thing you need to do is determine the size of the pack you need before you go shopping. It's strange, but the more space you have, the more you find that you can't do without. Take a good look at what you are going to need to take with you, then pick a pack to accommodate your needs. I've found that the more separate compartments the bag is divided into the handier it is to keep your belongings organized. Large side pockets really help, especially for guide books, maps and other items you want to get at quickly.

When you go shopping for a pack, start off in stores that specialize in outdoor sporting equipment — one where the people on staff understand the importance of a good fit, and answer questions. An understanding salesman won't cringe when you ask for 25 pounds of weight to load the pack and test its proper fit.

He knows that the ultimate decision to purchase a certain pack should be based on comfort. It's important when you're trying the fit of pack to keep the weight as close to your back and as high up as possible. When you are travelling, you'll find that loading your pack this way most comfortable as it distributes the weight onto your hips, rather than pulling back on your shoulders.

For the same reasons it's important to load lighter objects such as sleeping bags on the lower portion of your frame, with heavier objects such aq a tent, on top.

Take a look at the padding on the shoulder straps. It should be made of a high density foam or it will decay quickly and become extremely uncomfortable. To tell if you have the right size frame, the shoulder pads should be level, or slightly higher than your shoulders. Too low, your frame's too small, to high, your frame's too large.

While you've got your pack on, check to see if it has a comfortable back band, preferbly made of a nylon mesh. With my first pack, I didn't understand what my first pack, I didn't understand what this was for. I left for a trip without one and soon found out. Not only had I lost support, but air could no longer circulate easily between my back and the pack and it became most uncomfortable.

Picking a frame can get confusing. There are many different shapes and sizes. Of the three most popular, the straight ladder, the S-ladder frame, and the hip wrap frame — you'll find pros and cons for each.

The straight ladder frame is usually the budget special. The problem with it is that it doesn't follow the curve of your spine. Thus, you are not carrying the load in the natural position.

The S-ladder frame follows the curve of your spine more closely. It's usually more expensive, but easier on your shoulders.

The hip wrap frame has several pros and cons to it. Some peolple find having several inches of a frame extending around the hips retricting and uncomfortable when they walk. Advocates feel it provides a better form of weight distribution than any other model. It also has the added benefit of being able to sit upon its own when you take it off so it doesn't go through the wear and tear others do lying on the ground.

Frames are usually constructed out of three different types of material. Aluminum is the most popular, wood is more apt to break, and the polypropylene frame is fairly new. This new product doesn't have any seams or welds to worry about because it's moulded out of one piece of polypropylene. It's light, flexible and extremely adjustable for almost any size. The only point I would worry about is that it's so new on the Canadian market not too many people have been able to try it over a long duration yet.

If you're going to go for the aluminum frame, which most people do, check the joints. A welded joint affords better strength on the overal pack. A soldered joint can break more easily, especially if the solder does not completely cover the whole joint. That's what happened in my case.

One of the biggest mistakes I made with my pack was not investing in a hip belt. A hip belt is worth its weight in good. It helps distribute the weight between your shoulders and hips which is the ideal situation.

Faulty stitching can cause a lot of trouble. Look out for loose threads outside the pack and light filtering through the seam. Double stitching is ideal. it'll give you more strength at the seams where you need it.

Usually the manufacturer will use a cotton or synthetic thread. It's been said the cotton is better for waterproofing because it will swell when wet. But if you have it damp too often, too long, it will deteriorate faster than the synthetic.

Despite the best made plans of any traveller, sooner or later you are going to get caught in one good downpour. Now is the payoff — did you buy a pack that was waterproof or merely water-resistant? Did you pick one with a top flap large enough to let water run off rather than in? And did your zippers have covers to discourage leaks? Those storm flaps make a difference.

If you're planning on heading into really cold weather, watch out for metal zippers. They're very easily broken and frozen in cold weather. In cold, you are better off with a nylon zipper.

Once you have chosen the pack that's right for you, learn to look after it. When it comes to cleaning read the label. In some cases, some detergents can do a lot of harm to the protective coating.

Speedy Borsch

Speedy Borsch will warm up any cold winter's night. Drain 1 can (1 lb.) julienne beets; reserve the liquid. Add beets to 1 can (10¾ oz.) vegetable beef soup, seasoned with 1½ teaspoons seasoned salt and ½ teaspoon seasoned pepper; stir thoroughly. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Makes about 4 servings; top each with a dollop of sour cream.

Getting Jabbed More And Enjoying It Less?

What's in Store
Joan Watson

When the doctor gives the needle he says this is going to sting a little.

Translated, it means you're going to get jabbed and it's going to hurt.

Business and governments use exactly the same technique: they use the press to predict unpalatable developments before they occur. Shortages will bring higher consumer prices. A weak dollar will increase the price of imports. Taxes will rise. Unemployment will increase.

These are examples of the self-serving prophesies which are issued to prepare consumers for bad news. We generally get a rash of them in the New Year, or at the time of annual meetings, or bad weather reports.

Right now we are being told that beef and gas prices will continue to rise. Bread prices will increase. Cabinet ministers and the Bakery Council have not been able to agree on how much you're going to get dinged on a loaf of bread, but they've all agreed we'll pay more.

Lobbyists for special interest groups and governments issue their self-serving prophesies and then sit back and watch your reaction. If the reasons advanced seem logical, or inevitable, we tend to accept the news reluctantly but with little protest. If a price increase predicted to be 10 per cent turns out to be 9 per cent we're actually grateful.

Once in a while common sense tells us the increase is out of proportion, that a crop failure in one location or the removal of a subsidy couldn't boost the price of coffee by 100 per cent or the cost of a loaf of bread by 12 cents. The consumers complain. We ask for a more complete explanation of who's getting in on the deal and why. The increase in bread prices might have less to do with the cost of grain than the cost of labor and oil.

But consumers are ill-equipped to trace a retail price hike back through the merchandising complexities to the real source of the increase. Only when the yarn is too big to swallow do we rebel.

The coffee price increase two years ago was one of the rare instances when consumers wouldn't swallow the arguments or the prices and fought back with a boycott.

Coffee is one of the most political products. It's not just a case of consumers wanting a bargain clashing with profit-minded sellers. Governments and speculators are also in there carving out a profit.

The chain that links the coffee trees to the consumer begins with the growers who sell the bean to brokers, who peddle the beans ot exporters who in turn sell to companies that process the coffee.

Then the processor sells to the supermarket. All of these peopletake a profit because they've grown, stored, transported, processed and marketed the product.

But there are some big boys in there who do nothing to the beans. They just buy it, sell it, hoard it to create false shortages, dump it, even lie for it. Anything to make a profit.

And are they happy when something comes along like a killer frost that damages part of the harvest. The powerful and official Brazilian Coffee Institute will paint the blackest posssible picture about current and future supplies to stimulate prices. They might even hold some back from the market. Rumor has it there was an awful lot of coffee in Brazil. This is a classic example of a self-serving prophesy.

You can certainly be aware of the process and try to learn all you can to satisfy yourself on the question of whether the prophesy is legimate or not.

Credit Shopping Advised

Consumers should shop around for credit, a meeting sponsored by the Saanich parks and recreation department and the Victoria branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada was told this week.

Stan McLaren, a loans manager for West Coast Savings credit union, urged consumers to check the rate of interest at banks or loan agencies before borrowing.

When buying a car, he said, the purchaser should not necessarily finance the purchase through a car dealer because it might be cheaper to finance through a bank.

"Also ask how the loan is calculated and be sure you understand the instalment agreement before you sign."

McLaren said finance companies, banks, department stores and credit card companies follow certain guidelines in making loans.

Generallly speaking, he said, stability ranks high in determining an application for a loan.

"The person who has held the same job for 10 years and has his roots in the community is considered a good risk," he said.

The meeting was the third in a series of five being held at the Cedar Hill Community Centre every Wednesday at 1 p.m.

HOSPITAL 'DISASTER'

Health Minister Bob McClelland's edict that provincial hospitals restrict budgets to five per cent increases over 1977-1978 could be a short-term solution and a long-time disaster, Victoria General Hospital's executive administrator said today.

Jim Fair said while every one is aware of the need to keep costs as low as possible, the five per cent increase ceiling will only lead to cutbacks, lowered morale and eventual erosion of production.

Fair said Victoria hospitals, because of the large number of elderly in the city, have the highest occupancy rate in the country and B.C. hospitals must pay higher salaries and higher minimal wages than elsewhere.

Chairman Alan Patterson told the hospital board Thursday: "It looks to me as if we are going to be in for a very difficult year."

Fair said the hospital may have a deficit of about $600,000 this year, eating into the five per cent increase already.

Wages account for 80 to 81 per cent of the hospital's budget and will probably rise about eight per cent during the next fiscal year, Patterson said.

He said a meeting with the minister Monday had confirmed the ministry is serious about the five per cent ceiling.

While the hospital had managed to trim some of the 22 per cent increase projected last December, Patterson said it is still nowhere near five per cent.

School Sewage Health Hazard Probed

Saanich school district officials carried out tests today to check allegations that sewage from Claremont senior secondary school poses a health hazard to the Cordova Bay area.

But school board chairman Lois Walsh said the tests may well confirm that the school's septic disposal system is working efficiently, and that sewage in nearby ditches comes from other sources.

The investigation follows a call Thursday by Saanich Ald. Irene Block for the school to be closed immediately as a health hazard.

She was commenting on the school district's application to the Pollution Control Branch for Claremont to discharge an average of 7,500 gallons of effluent daily into a storm drain.

The school has been operating for two years without a PCB permit.

Block described the situation as shocking and expressed surprise that there has been no public outcry from Cordova Bay residents.

She claimed space could be found for the displaced students in other school buildings which now stand empty, but Saanich school trustee Rubymay Parrott said Block is talking nonsense.

"That is a very irresponsible statement for a member of council to make," she said.

"There is absolutely nowhere in the Saanich school district where we have empty school buildings to accommodate 750 senior students."

Board chairman Walsh said after effluent is dicharged from the sand filter system it flows through a pipe on adjacent farm property and then into a ditch.

But Walsh said an independent consultant earlier told the board that the sand filter system is working well.

"We've been told we have the situation well under control on our own property, so we can only conclude that possibly a few other people are connected to this line," she said.

However, Walsh said in view of the concern expressed by residents and others further tests would be done today.

Pledge on Bowron

The Bowron Lakes Provincial Park blowdown area would be reforested and roads removed if logged, Lands and Parks Minister Jim Chabot said Thursday.

He admitted the blowdown area is in a high rainfall region, but said it still constituted a fire hazard.

Red Cross Quitting Homemaker Duties

The service, which was launched by the Red Cross, is being turned over to a new society being organized by the health ministry's long-term care program staff.

Details of the new society will be announced later.

The staff of the Red Cross service will be tranferred to the new society and there will be no interruption in services to clients.

Red Cross spokesman Dr. Olga Jardine said Red Cross policy is to pioneer and operate some community programs only until they can be handed over to a local voluntary board suitably financed.

"Homemakers services fall into this category. The appropriate time has now come to regretfully turn over the services to a new management."

Roof Was Searched, Security Guards Say

Two security guards told a coroner's jury Thursday night they carried out searches of the roof of the Oak Bay Manor less than an hour before an elderly patient was found near death above the personal-care wing.

Stephen Borden and John McLean said they found no trace of Florence Young, 78, after being alerted the woman was missing the night of Jan. 6.

McLean said he was surprised to learn Oak Bay police had discovered Mrs. Young on the roof shortly after midnight.

The woman was taken to hospital suffering from hypothermia and a heart attack but died minutes after being admitted.

Borden said he had stepped out on the roof at about 11:40 p.m. but because the surface was icy and hazardous and he didn't have a flashlight with him, didn't venture far.

McLean said he had searched the roof from end to end about 15 minutes earlier.

Nurse Jean Rose Armstrong said she noticed Mrs. Young missing between 6:30 and 7 p.m.

She said she organized a search involving the other seven staff members on duty that night. As Mrs. Young often wandered around the ward, occasionally slipping into someone else's bed, the staff wasn't concerned until a thorough search failed to find her.

She said police were eventually called in at 10:30 p.m.

Trustees Seek Commissioner

Greater Victoria school board is looking around the community for a chairman to head an education commission.

The chairman will be the only paid member of the commission, which will be formed to examine the educational needs and goals of the district and relate those needs to existing facilities.

But trustees haven't figured out whether the job is full or part time, or how much the chairman gets paid.

The board wants members of the community to submit nominations and will select the chairman Feb. 6.

Other commission members will be selected by the board's new planning committee and will include parents, trustees and interested local residents.

The board expects a comprehensive report from the commission in October.

Import Car Dealers Hurting

By ROGER SMITH
Canadian Press

VANCOUVER — Dealers handling imported cars are counting on a rebound of the Canadian dollar to help them maintain their share of the market against new domestic competition.

However, at least one major import dealer in Vancouver would rather switch than fight.

Henning Brasso, a Datsun dealer for 11 years, last week turned his back on the Japanese compacts and signed with Lincoln-Mercury, one of the Ford Motor Co.'s two franchise lines.

Brasso cited price increases, caused by inflation and by the weakness of the Canadian dollar relative to the Japanese yen, as the main reason for his declining sales and subsequent switch.

"We were doing 2,000 cars (a year) at our peak," he said. "Last year we did 400."

Some import dealers are critical of those who drop out as soon as the market gets rough.

"What dealers are experiencing is that a number of them who made large amounts of money in the early going, and made it easily, are not able to adapt to the hard going," said Jerry Kramer, general sales manager of Nissan Automobile Co. which distributes Datsun in Canada.

"They are not willing to face the hard times that have been regular for domestic dealers."

Import dealers in the early 1970s captured the public imagination and sales with low-priced compacts that were cheaper to run than the big North American models.

Taking up to 20 per cent of the national market, imports did even better in British Columbia, where they accounted for about half of new car market.

Though slow to respond, Ford, General Motors and Chrysler parried with small economy cars. That competition, combined with rising import prices brought on by the sinking Canadian dollar, has squeezed the import dealers.

Their share of the market last year dropped to 14-per-cent nationally and to 30 per cent in B.C.

Kramer said Datsun's peak year was 1971 when almost 11,000 cars and trucks were sold in Nissan's Pacific region.

That figure dropped to 7,000 last year, but Kramer said part of the decline was due to Datsun shipping cars east which might have been sold in B.C.

He said Datsun's 41 Pacific region dealers (down from a high of 50) hope to sell about 8,000 units this year and, "we don't all read it as doom and gloom."

Sid Reynolds, zone manager for Canadian Honda Motor Ltd., whose Western Canada retail sales were down about 20 per cent in 1978, said:

"My feeling is that import car sales would not have any further problems if the Canadian dollar stabilizes. If you can tell me what the dollar is going to do, I can tell you what we're going to do."

Other dealers said some car buyers shy away from imports due to publicity about the sinking dollar and rising yen, forgetting that domestic car prices also are going up.

"It's created an image in the public's mind," said Cec Hellaby, western regional manager of Canadian Motor Industries, Toyota's Canadian distributors.

Toyota sales dropped from highs of 10,000 a year between 1972 and 1974 to 5,800 last year.

Though comparisons can be misleading due to model and design changes, prices of basic compact sedans—the kind of car consumers saw as an alternative to expensive domestic products—have gone up considerably:

—Toyota's Corolla, less than $2,000 in 1970, now is more than $5,000.

—A two-door Honda Civic now lists at $4,695, up from $2,900 in March, 1975.

—A Datsun 510 has increased by about $1,000 in the past year.

—The Volkswagen Beetle, the archetypal small car that once sold for well under $2,000, no longer is produced, and Volkswagen's current big seller, the Rabbit, starts at $5,845.

It's those figures that Brasso says chased him away from imports.

"I think the market they will be able to remain in will be the specialty market—sports cars, the kind of thing they were in on 20 years ago, before the import boom," he said.

SHORT SHRIFT FOR $

OTTAWA (CP) — The economy got short shrift at Prime Minister Trudeau's news conference today.

After a torrent of questions concerning the report released Thursday by the Task Force on Canadian Unity, Trudeau was asked for his assessment of the prospects for unemployment, inflation and the dollar during the next six months.

"They look good to me," Trudeau said.

"All three?" asked the reporter.

Latest figures indicate the 12-month inflation rate for December was 8.4 per cent and the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate for the month was 8.1 per cent.

Opening lead - three of hearts.

A fine declarer is forever busy trying to assure the contract whenever it's possible to do so. He does not relax his efforts merely because he sees that the contract is safe if the defenders' cards are divided normally. He goes well beyond thi and caters to the possibility that the cards are divided unfavorably.

Here is a case in point. West leads a heart won by South with the ace. There does not seem to be much to the play at this point. Declarer notes that he can ruff a heart in dummy, play a trump to the ace, ruff another heart, then play the K-Q of trumps, after which he can run dummy's clubs and so score twelve tricks.

However, though this method of play is very promising, it presupposes a 3-2 trump division, an assumption that declarer cannot safely make. In the actual deal, if South follows the line of least resistance and adopts the method of play described above, he winds up one trick short of the mark. He eventually loses a trump trick and three diamonds.

Instead, South should try to arrange his play so that he makes the contract whether the trumps are divided 3-2 or 4-1. He does this by ruffing a heart in dummy at trick two, then leading a trump and "finessing" the eight. South certainly does not expect the eight to win; he plays the eight to maintain control of trumps if they prove to hold declarer to eleven tricks.

If it turns out that the spades are divided 3-2, South loses a trick unnecessarily because of his safety measure, but this 30-point loss is a very cheap premium to pay for avoiding a possible loss of 750 points.

"BUT IT'S HARD TO MAKE A SNOWMAN THAT DON'T LOOK LIKE MR. WILSON, MOM!"

WORDY GURDY

BY TRICKY RICKY

Every answer is a rhyming pair of words (like FAT CAT and DOUBLE TROUBLE), and they will fit in the letter squares. The number after the definition tells you how many syllables in each word. To win $10, send your original rhymes with your definitions to this newspaper. All entries become the property of UFS, Inc.

Thanks and $10 to Lisa Taylor of Arkadelphia, AR., for #6. Send your entry to this newspaper.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, January 27

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Excitement of discovery is featured. You learn who cares, who could care less. Love, esteem, pride, satisfaction are part of a crowded scenario. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Maintain independent, confident stance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Challenge, obstacles, obstructions are part of your day. But you overcome, keys are practically placed in your hands. You locate what has been missing. Aquarius, Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently—so does the number 11.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with communication, travel, spirituality, education. What seemed long ago and far away . . . turns out to be available—here-and-now. Sagittarius. Virgo—and another Gemini—figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Deal with practical matters. Accent on leases, rentals, financial positions, reaching budget agreements with partners or spouse. Check fine print, read between lines, do home-work, be thorough. Strive for greater self-reliance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Go slow, study Cancer message, analyze odds, take no unnecessary chances. Emphasis on basic issues, employment, dependents and health. One who is active, attractive wants something for nothing—from you. And now you are forewarned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Steady pace should be selected over sensationalism. Make amends to family member for recent misunderstanding. Deal with Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons. You win through diplomacy and lose through force. The choice may be difficult, but it is your own.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct. 22): Define terms, make meanings crystal clear. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. One who attracts you is also attracted. You may be surprised, amazed and exuberant. Change, challenge, writing variety, stimulus to creativity are featured.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stress organization, familiarity with available material, willingness to assume responsibility. Accent now on challenge, threat, overcoming odds to protect territory. Play a good "defensive" game!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish rather than initiate project. Get pulse of public—improve distribution, display. Short trip is on agenda, is message that needs to be "verified." A relative, in transit, makes special request.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New approach brings profits. Know it and act accordingly. Leo, Gemini. Aquarius figure prominently. You get needed material. Funding is available, if you strive to present an original presentation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get what you want—cycle is high and many willl be flattering and applauding you. Hunch pays off, family member has viable plan. You feel more secure, warm, loved. You do have "right" to celebrate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Give full reign to intellectual curiosity. Make inquiries, expand horizons, participate in meeting, conference aimed at building, aiding persons ill or handicapped. If you give, you also willl receive. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

IF JANUARY 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you draw people to you with their troubles. You are actually better at helping others than when it comes to aiding yourself. You know the meaning of drama—you utilize suspense in illustrating beliefs, principles. Aries, Libra person play important roles in your life. August could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring added recognition, the completion of a project, the expanding or horizons, the ability to perceive potential. Travel indicated in March, along with acceleratd social activity. You could run for public office and win this year.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Don't worry about that, just write it down," said George. "It's a regular 8-digit number, so what are you fussing about?"

"I wanted to check it, but that's okay now," Ron replied. "It is a perfect square, as I thought. And there's something else. Its first half is one less than its second half."

A very special number! But what was it?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: CROWD was 10325.

39 PERSONALS

SOMEWHERE IN VICTORIA, I am convinced, is the right man for me. We just haven't met yet. He is between 35 and 40, over 5'10", well built, and has travelled. He is versatile, enjous dining out and classical music as much as building campfires in the wilderness. He loves intelligent conversation, has a keen sense of humour, enjoys a comfortable home and the attentions of a very affectionate woman. He seeks a committed partnership, and is sufficiently secure with himself to respect the strength and independence of an outgoing mate. He is attracted to a slim woman with a definite personality and goals of her own. If this piques your curiousity, perhaps you would be interested in meeting an attractve woman of 33, Cancer, divorced, and longing for a worthwhile relationship. Detailed replies only to Victoria Press Box 77.

TO THE LADY WHO ANSWERed my ad Jan 9, Box 788 and signed "lonely too", point well made and agreed upon, but if that's true, than you must give me a chance too. How do you know I'm not the one your looking for? If you like write Victoria Press, Box 788.

SINCERE SEMI-RETIRED gentleman 51, owner of Island home in Nanaimo-Lantzville area, would like to meet lady of approximately same age in similar circumstances with small means. Please send reply with picture to Victoria Press, Box 56.

MALE, SEPARATED, STEADY job, own home, looking for female, 25-40 yrs. for companionship etc. Should be interested in travelling, weekends away, boating, fishing, outdoors. Live south of Ladysmith. Recent snap and phone no. to Box 80, Victoria Press.

"WOULD ANYONE KNOWING the whereabouts of Michael Derek Newstead believed to be residing in the City of Victoria, please contact Monica Wolff, Oak Bay and Central Intake, 1627 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C. V8R 1H8 Ph: 598-5121."

SINCERE ATTRACTIVE widow, youthful, late forties, loves the outdoors, seeks the companionship of a sincere unattached gentleman for a meaningful relationship. No triflers. Victoria Press Box 79.

OLDER LADY WOULD LIKE TO meet another older lady, non smoker, with similar interests, to live in my home, and share monthly expenses. Please reply to Victoria Press, Box 44.

MATTRESSES
LATEX RUBBER — Mattresses automatically adjust to variations in weight giving even support the full length of the spine. Latex is comfortable, cool, and non-allergenic.
"Q"-FOAM — is highly resilient foam that comes in a variety of density, which enables us to manufacture a mattress to the specifications recommended by many doctors.
We manufacture mattresses in odd shapes and sizes, with box springs to match, available in spring filled or solid base.

HOW TO WRITE

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 IN MEMORIAM

DEROCHE - In loving memory of Armand (Blackie) who passed away Jan. 26th, 1978.
One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home-it was His will;
Within our hearts he liveth still.

PRATT — In memory of Mum, (Isabel) who passed away on Jan. 25, 1977. And to Dad, (James), who passed away on April 23, 1972.

309 IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In ever loving memory of my very beloved husband Doug, dad and granddad who entered Eternal rest, so suddenly, one year ago today, January 26, 1978.
We shall meet again in a brighter land,
Where farewell is never spoken,
We shall clasp each others hand in hand,
And the clasp shall not be broken.
"We have loved you deeply in life.
We shall not forget you in death."
- So very much missed, and lovingly remembered by your wife Peg, daughter Kathleen, son Doug, and their precious families.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
- WITH GRATITUTE, SANDS

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Starting Seeds Inside

GARDENING
hilda beastall

The early starting of seeds indoors has been greatly simplified by the use of cleverly designed plastic greenhouses with carefully controlled heating, lighting and ventilation.

These wonders of the age can be operated successfully in the darkest basement, or in a living room or sun room, for they are not dependent on surrounding conditions.

To learn the outline of their use, borrow a couple of books from public libraries, finding them in the index files under "growing under lights indoors" or similar headings. The librarian at the information desk will be glad to guide you once your needs are known.

There is usually an information pamphlet with the plastic kit when you buy, or with the light kit when you buy it, if the two are separate. Read these several times, with the help of the library books.

It does help too if you have had experience with sowing and growing seeds in containers. You will then realize the importance of several steps in the procedure.

However, many home gardeners will still be wanting to start a few seeds indoors with the aid only of daylight from windows and heat from the source that heats the home.

By the end of January, seeds of some plants — snapdragons for instance — can be sown indoors. These flowering annuals are slow growing after germination, and require almost 12 weeks of growing in moderate conditions before being ready for planting outdoors either to the garden or into balcony containers.

The home gardener will probably choose just two colors of snapdragons for they will make a finer showing than when mixed.

Use a two-inch deep container, filled with screened sandy compost. Sow seeds in shallow depressions with an inch between the rows; cover with a scattering of the soil mixture and press lightly to make contact between soil and seeds. Have soil well dampened before sowing but not soggy.

Cover with polythene, or put container in plastic vegetable bag, with a tie to keep closed.

Mild bottom heat is needed to aid germination, so a place on a windowsill or table near a source of heat will be chosen.

After two or three days, check daily for signs of seeds sprouting; opening the bag daily will prevent excessive condensation.

When white dots indicate germination, remove container to place without bottom heat but with more direct light. The plastic bag can be removed when seeds are judged to be fully through which should be within 14 days.

If sown thinly, snaps can be at half-inch spacing, and need no thinning. Turn container several times daily to prevent reaching of seedlings towards light which weakens them. They really need strong overhead daylight for short strong growth.

In about a week after germination, get the container of seedlings into a still cooler place. A small sunroom with glass on three sides is ideal. Keep damp but not wet.

Here they will grow in cool temperatures until April, then the snaps may go into a coldframe for hardening before planting into garden beds or into planters on a balcony. Five or six dozen plants of well grown snapdragons are something to be proud of when they commence blooming at the end of May.

The spikes of bloom continue to come in succession until well into October in average years if the fading stems are cut off before seed pods are formed. A worthwhile project for the home gardener.

ANTIQUE shop manager Muriel Madden displays a Madonna and Child canvas that business associate Terry Trainor bought for $95 in his Calgary store. Trainor says he's had offers of $200,000 for the painting, thought to date back more than 400 years, but he's not sure he wants to sell.

$110M in Grants For Municipalities

Unconditional grants totalling $109.9 million for B.C.'s 140 municipalities were announced Thursday by Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm.

The figure represents a $3.6 million increase on the total of unconditional grants distributed last year, and Vander Zalm said the grants will form part of a total revenue-sharing package whose projected value for 1979 is $141.7 million.

The seven Greater Victoria municipalities account for nearly $10 million of the total.

Vancouver Island Communities as listed on the grant sheet are:

Saanich, $3.9 million; Victoria, $3.3 million; Nanaimo, $2.2 million; Port Alberni, $1.1 million; Oak Bay, $945,996 and North Cowichan, $814,032.

Esquimalt will receive $820,110, Campbell River, $651,259, Courtenay $388,425, Central Saanich $369,364, and Sidney $343,923.

Comox will receive $277,977 while North Saanich gets $232,704. Duncan will receive $217,353, Ladysmith $197,701, Port Hardy $206,952, Parksville $161,468, Lake Cowichan $143,079, Gold River $108,813, Cumberland $112,606, Qualicum Beach $91,747, Tahsis $112,453, Port McNeill $91,404, Ucluelet $61,821.

Under the revenue-sharing act, municipalities and regional districts are collectively entitled to grants equal to the combined value of one point of personal income tax, one point of corporate income tax and six per cent of the province's sales tax, renewable and non-renewable resource receipts.

The total amount generated by the revenue-sharing formula has increased 5.4 per cent over 1978.

Dancers' Health Checked

VANCOUVER (UPC) — An Indian band is closely monitoring the health of two women undergoing tribal initiation rites in a reserve in the Fraser Valley because of an RCMP investigation into four recent deaths incured during similar ceremonies.

RCMP spokesmen said they were not worried about the ceremony and did not plan to intervene but were continuing with an investigation of four recent deaths of Salish Indians who took part in initiation ceremonies for secret longhouse societies.

The two women ended the second day of the four-day ceremony Thursday. A spokeswoman for the Chehalish band of Salish Indians would not identify the participants or discuss details of the rites, but said the two were in no physical danger.

Chief Bill Williams of the Chehalis Band said members of the Salish tribe would continue to take part in the rites despite a 29-year-old provincial ban on spirit dancing.

In the ceremonies, initiates may be stripped, blindfolded and subjected to tests of physical stamina, sometimes involving immersion in freezing lake water, fasting and beatings.

GM Admits Secret Assembly Line Speed-Up Device

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — Chevrolet has admitted to the United Auto Workers that nearly 1,600 trucks were built with free labor through a secret system to increase the speed of assembly lines, a UAW vice-president said Thursday.

UAW Local 598 has called a strike for Monday morning by its 7,000 members if no settlement is reached on back pay the union says is due the workers who were affected.

"In my history with the UAW, which covers 35 years, I have never seen anything like the situation that existed at Chevrolet's truck assembly plant," Irving Bluestone, UAW vice-president and director of its GM department, said. "I have had discussion with Chevrolet at great length over this matter and will continue to do so with the hope of resolving this matter."

An electrical switch hidden in a superintendents' office at Chevy's local truck assembly plant was used to surreptitiously increase the speed of assembly lines for limited periods during a period of at least six months last year, union officials told the Flint Journal.

Spokesmen for the General Motors Corp. division have admitted the device existed and that three superintendents were suspended, then transferred, the newspaper said.

Assembly line speeds are negotiated with management by the UAW locals. If assembly line speeds must be increased to increase production, the automaker is supposed to hire more workers.

The UAW says the three superintendents would speed up the lines for 20 minutes to 25 minutes over a nine-hour shift when it appeared to them that the plant might fall short on production schedules for the day.

The union maintains the speed-up device was in use for 18 months, or three times as long as Chevrolet admits, and that 3,000 workers deserve back pay.

TRAIN TOLL 70

DACCA (AP) — An express passenger traain packed with men, women and children ran off the tracks in western Bangladesh today, killing at least 70 persons and injuring 182 in the country's worst train crash, officials reported.

The officials said by telephone from Chuadanga, 160 kilometres west of here near the border with India, that four persons were still trapped in crumpled train cars hours after the accident.

CLASSIC COSTUME in Thunderbird and Eagle motif produced some fascinated faces in Grade 4 class Thursday at George Jay elementary. Inside costume was Calvin Hunt, of famed Indian family, who took four months to create costume. Youngsters, who are studying North West Coast Indians, were entranced by close-up of colorful garb which Hunt designed for Germany's Hamburg Museum.

A strike with a potential gross of $2 billion has triggered a modern-day gold rush in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The find by a Nanaimo logger who prospects part-time, is rated by a mining company president Ken Sanders as one of the most fantastic discoveries in Canadian history.

Sanders said Thursday his company, Consolidated Cinola Mines Ltd. (NPL) has a purchase option at the site discovered about eight years ago by Efrem Specogna, of Nanaimo.

Sanders said preliminary drilling revealed a low grade ore in a huge deposit. But last year researchers sank a diamond drill shaft that indicated a rich mother-lode was hidden in the area as well.

"All of a sudden last fall we hit fantastic high grade ore deposits. We were getting one ounce per ton for 80 feet in this drill hole. It was ten times as high as the grades we had been getting, and you can believe it was a tremendous thrill to hit that."

Gold is selling for over $230 an ounce.

"I fall trees during the week and look on weekends," Specogna said in an interview from Kokish, an isolated logging camp on northern Vancouver Island.

"I worked up there (in the Charlottes) for two or three years and I used to prospect with my brother-in-law. We find many things up there but this was the best of all.

"We looked for years for molybdenum deposits and when we finally found it they made a park there."

Specogna said that over the years a lot of companies have expressed interest in his Juskatla Inlet claim.

"But they never came through."

Asked if he is happy to have finally hit it lucky, Specogna replied: "Well I have a contract (with Consolidated), but I don't know. It's human; I guess you always hope for more."

Sanders said Consolidated has already paid Specogna $60,000 for a test development on the site, and will purchase the claim from him in April for $390,000.

"I think he's been paid about $150,000 for options by other major companies since he staked the initial block of claims," said Sanders.

"He's the best prospector in B.C. as far as I'm concerned," he added.

Sanders says that once word of the find got out prospectors from far and near started to flock to the Charlottes and Consolidated's stock soared.

"We have placed $1 million in the treasury through stock market action since last fall. Now we're going full speed ahead and we're putting $400,000 into the property immediately.

"We're continuing exploration and going for bigger things. It's pretty close to being a cinch for a mine."

He said Consolidated is planning an open pit operation — which would be a first for gold mining in B.C. — that could see 100 million tons of ore extracted.

"We're looking at a potential of $2 billion gross. This site has fantastic potential. It's darn good grade for open pit mining and there are no mines in Canada or the U.S. that have this potential."

The claim site covers 2,500 acres.

Sanders said that when word of the rich drill hole finding filtered out, the Queen Charlotte Islands started to go a little gold crazy.

"Everyone was talking about it and when I was up there before New Year's all the accommodation was taken. The Island was full of people and there were people and helicopters going everywhere.

1978 Trade Surplus A Record at $3.5B

OTTAWA (CP) — A healthy increase in exports to the United States helped give Canada a record trade surplus in 1978 of $3.52 billion, Statistics Canada reported today.

The record high compares with a merchandise trade surplus of $2.92 billion in 1977 and $1.34 billion in 1976.

Statistics Canada reported on the basis of preliminary figures that exports totalled $52.3 billion in 1978 and imports totalled $48.8 billion.

The lower value of the Canadian dollar—which makes Canadian goods cheaper abroad—and the healthy U.S. economy helped push exports south of the border to $37 billion last year, up from $31 billion in 1977.

Exports to the U.S. accounted for 70.3 per cent of total sales abroad, up slightly from 69.9 per cent in 1977, Statistics Canada said.

Imports from the U.S. totalled $35 billion, up from $29.6 billion in 1977.

Japan was the next largest trading partner after the U.S., buying $3.05 billion in exports last year, up from $2.5 billion in 1977.

Britain bought $2 billion in goods last year, up only slightly from $1.95 billion in 1977.

Wheat exports in 1978 totalled $1.9 billion, up from $1.83 billion in 1977.

Exports of forest products showed healthy gains in 1978 over a year earlier. Wood and paper exports totalled $9.4 billion, up from $7.75 billion.

Iran Troops Open Fire

TEHRAN (AP) — Troops in Tehran and the western city of Sanandaj opened fire today on thousands of supporters of Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomeini angered by the government's delaying his return to Iran. There were reports of at least 14 dead and 55 wounded.

Khomeini aides at his exile headquarters in France said Iranian army troops joined in anti-government protests in the cities of Isfahan and Tabriz.

Residents of Tabriz said heavy shooting broke out in the downtown area of that northwestern city. Opposition sources claimed an undetermined number of people were killed in clashes in Tabriz between police and demonstrators.

The official Pars news agency said there also had been pro-government marches both in Tabriz and Zahedan in eastern Iran.

The state radio said nine persons were killed in Tehran violence and hospital sources said at least 30 others were wounded. Pars reported estimates that five persons were killed and 25 others wounded in Sanandaj.

Khomeini spokesman Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said in France that opposition reports from Iran indicated 15 persons had been killed and 1,000 arrested in today's "enormous demonstrations." But some of the Tehran demonstrators, their hands smeared with blood, told reporters that more than 30 were killed in the capital alone.

Ghotbzadeh said that according to his information soldiers joined in pro-Khomeini demonstrations in the southern city of Isfahan and took part in an anti-government hunger strike in the northeastern city of Mashhad.

The foes of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar armed themselves with wooden and metal staves and set fire to tires and garbage in the streets around Tehran University. Thick black smoke billowed over buildings in the heart of the city.

The crowd taunted the soldiers with shouts of "Death to Bakhtiar!"

No Protection Of Rights: PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the Task Force on Canadian Unity is "dead wrong" in thinking that provinces will protect minority language rights of their citizens.

"There's a basic disagreement," Trudeau said at a news conference. His government continued to feel that English-language rights in Quebec and French-language rights elsewhere had to be protected by constitutional guarantees.

In its final report, released Thursday, the unity commission said provinces should be free to determine the official language within their own borders. And they should given responsibility for protecting language rights for minority groups. (For provincial reaction to the report, see page 14.)

Trudeau described that position as naive, saying there has recently been an erosion of English-language rights in Quebec.

The prime minister said he envies the optimism shown by the eight-member unity commission.

But 120 years of history had shown that minority-language groups need more protection than that provided by provincial laws.

TAX-HIKE WARNING FOR U.K. STRIKERS

LONDON (AP) — Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey has warned strikers paralysing Britain that if their pay demands are met, not only will they face huge industrial layoffs, but he'll increase taxes in his next budget due in April.

He spoke in the House of Commons Thursday night as a crippling walkout by 58,000 truckers dragged on, 1.5 million public-service workers continued wildcat strikes and slowdowns, and 26,000 railway engineers staged the fourth in a series of one-day nationwide stoppages. All want pay increases of between 10 and 45 per cent.

The government, in its fight to bring down inflation in Britain, said last year that pay raises in 1979 should be limited voluntarily to five per cent. But unions that had accepted pay limitations for the last three years insisted on returning to "free collective bargaining."

Healey warned that if pay settlements exceed the government's five-per-cent guidelines, inflation would rise to 10 per cent in the summer and about 13 per cent by the end of the year. It now is about eight per cent. Such an increase, he said, "would put us back to where we were in 1976." When the government first suggested pay guidelines in 1975, the inflation rate was 25 per cent.

Britain's miners met Thursday with officials of the nationalized Coal Board, who said there was only enough money in the board's treasury for pay increases of between one and two per cent. The miners are asking for a 40-per-cent raise.

Hypnotist To Repay $125,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — A hypnotist who used her craft for unethical ends has been ordered by the British Columbia Supreme Court to return a total of $125,000 in property to a Vancouver Island man.

Albert Tannock, 66, said he was under the influence of Dorothy Bromley, of Nanaimo, from July, 1974 to January, 1977.

During that period, he said, he signed over deeds to his home in Parksville and gave the woman half-ownership in an $80,000 farm in Nanaimo.

He said the woman convinced him to give her a car worth about $4,500, a stereo and valuable coins.

Mair Demands New Change

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A lawyer for Environment Minister Rafe Mair has written B.C. Supreme Court chief Justice Allan McEachern in an effort to get Mair's name completely removed from a judgment which suggested Mair meddled in a rentalsman case.

Mr.Justice Richard Anderson Thursday amended his earlier ruling — in which he censured Mair for "unwarranted interference" in a landlord-tenant dispute — to say that he based his decision on hearsay evidence.

But that doesn't go far enough, says Mair.

"Unfortunately the amended reasons still contain the same rebuke that was there at the outset," Mair said today.

So his lawyer, J.J. Gow of Victoria, wrote Thursday to the chief justice asking him to bring Mair's concerns to the attention of Mr. Justice Anderson.

If a further amendment is refused, Mair admits he has no further recourse.

Mair said he is hopeful the judgment will be amended to indicate there were no facts before him to warrant any suggestion of any kind of wrongdoing on his part.

If Mair gets the amendment, he indicated he might not proceed with libel action against the Vancouver Express which printed a story based on Mr. Justice Anderson's original judgment.

In his written judgment Monday, Mr. Justice Anderson said evidence showed Mair had telephoned the rentalsman's office Oct. 20 last year after a column by Doug Collins in the Vancouver Sun criticized the rentalsman's handling of an appeal by a Vancouver woman against an order from the rentalsman to vacate her suite.

Mair has categorically denied he telephoned the rentalsman to interfere in the dispute.

Mr. Justice Anderson, in a two-page supplement to his original ruling, said Mair's denial must be accepted, agreeing the evidence on which he based his decision was hearsay.

In his letter to Chief Justice McEachern, Gow said the publicity "has resulted in grievous disparagement of our client's personal and political reputation and integrity of a most odious and calumnious kind."

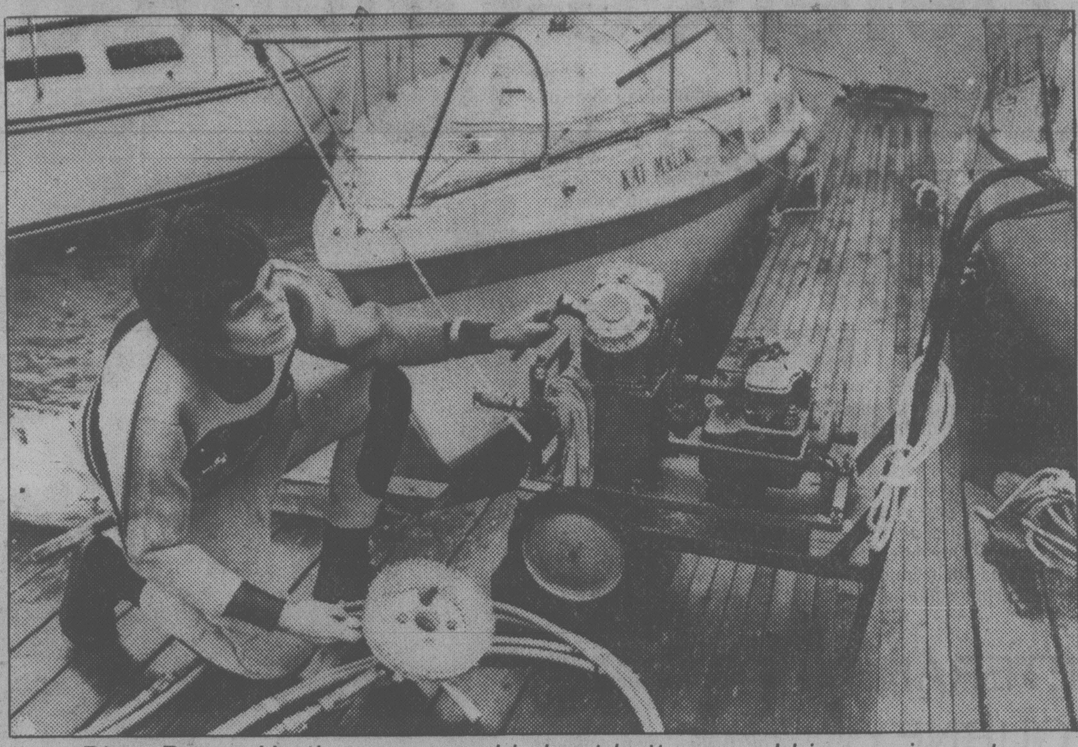
He Really Knows The Bottom Line



Diver Danny Hartlen prepares his boat bottom scrubbing equipment

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Danny Hartlen scrubs bottoms for a living.

Boat bottoms.

When he gets a call, he gathers up his drysuit, tanks, hydraulic pump and other gear and is off to his next floating client.

A pleasure diver for seven years, he now utilizes his experience to bring a unique service to local boaters.

While most people clean, or have others clean the bottom of their boat, either on shore or on the ways, Hartlen does the job while a boat is still tied up alongside.

He said he first got the idea when he was a crew member aboard the sloop Kai Malino, owned by Vic Gate, who races with the Canoe Bay Sailing Club.

Gate, in an effort to keep competitive, used to have his boat's bottom cleaned and painted twice a year.

Hartlen read how divers in Florida, California and the Gulf of Mexico make a living cleaning boat bottoms and decided Victoria should have its own bottom-bather.

He invested $6,000 in equipment and started business last June.

But unlike his counterparts in Florida, the water in which Hartlen works is frigid most of the time.

He says the cold poses no problem but it's obvious he's hardy. That bluish-red tinge to his face when he pops to the surface after a cleaning job wasn't there when he descended.

Hartlen earned his living fixing roofs until he started his new business. He now hopes to work in both extremes, plying his trade in the in the depths when he's not busy topside.

While keel-cleaning is particularly important to racing sailors, Hartlen says power boats and cruisers can also benefit from his service.

Heavy haul-out charges need only be met once every two years, instead of annually, if keels are scrubbed regularly. Hartlen's fee of $1.25 a foot has already appealed to about 35 boaters since he went into business.

Hartlen always uses the buddy system when he's on the job. He had diving friend Hugh Parry with him when the Times watched him in action.

One of these days Hartlen's business card may also read Hartlen and Son.

No $400,000 Promise To Library, Says Bawlf

Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf angrily denied Thursday charges that he has backed down on promises of cash aid to help in relocation of Victoria's central library.

Bawlf insisted he never promised that $400,000 would be available from the Recreation Facilities Assistance Fund for the move and accused Victoria Mayor Mike Young and Esquimalt Mayor Art Young of not telling all the facts about a discussion he had with them on the subject.

The two mayors said earlier Thursday that at a meeting last July the minister raised the possibility of the grant and had implied that the amount available would be close to $400,000.

On Wednesday Bawlf issued a news release warning the grant might be only about $150,000 under the terms of legislation governing the recreation fund.

However, the minister also emphasized that no decision has been made on the size of the grant or on any other steps that might be taken to help the library with the move.

Because of a shifting of cabinet responsibilities in December, it now will be Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis who makes the final decision, not Bawlf.

Bawlf said the root of the problem is that the legislation governing the recreation fund specifies that the province will pay up to one-third of the capital costs of suitable projects to a ceiling of $400,000.

Bawlf said he always made it clear to the mayors that they could receive the full amount of $400,000 only if they could prove $1.2 million in legitimate capital expenditures for the library move, not including the rent.

He told them there might be ways the shareable costs could be increased — for example, by changing long-term costs that were to be amortized over the period of the lease into one-time expenditures — but to the best of his knowledge the library board's only application to the recreation fund provided for legitimate capital expenditures of only about $450,000 — enough for a provincial grant of about $150,000.

Bawlf said the July meeting occurred when the mayors of the four core municipalities, the partners in the library board, complained that the move was going to be too expensive for them, despite the fact that he had already succeeded in negotiating a $100,000-a-year reduction in rent from the buildings corporation.

The mayors asked what other provincial assistance might be available, he said, and he brought up the possibility of a grant under the recreation fund.

He told them that they could get as much as $400,000, he said, but always emphasized the difficulties they would have in finding capital costs high enough to receive the maximum grant.

In suggesting that Bawlf had told them they could be reasonably sure of getting the full $400,000, the two mayors "did not relate the full facts of our discussion," he said.

"They are suggesting by omission something quite different from what I said."

Asked what the government might do if it appeared the whole library deal would fall through because of the grant problem, Bawlf answered, "I don't know what we could do. All we can do is what we are empowered by law to do."

The only other possible alternative would be for Curtis to find a funding source other than the recreation fund, he said, but he had no immediate ideas of what this might be.

Bus Criticism 'Hysterical'

Two cabinet ministers criticized local politicians after meeting Thursday with the head of the Seattle company that will operate the Gray Line bus tours in Victoria.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, who originally negotiated the sale of Gray Line to Ed Cedergren of Seattle, said it is time to put an end to "the hysterical anti-Americanism simply for partisan purposes."

And Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm, who completed the deal, said he is tired of "this bunch of garbage from some (Victoria) aldermen."

Ald. Robin Blencoe has criticized the sale of Gray Line to an American company when a local syndicate also bid.

Curtis said he would do exactly the same thing if he had the decision to make over again.

"There's no question in my mind Cedergren's firm has the capacity to service the visitor industry in Victoria," he said after he, Vander Zalm, Bawlf and a number of civic officials and local tourist business operators met Cedergren.

Cedergren has just incorporated a new company — Gray Line of Victoria — and has promised it will not be subservient to the Seattle company.

Management decisions will be made in Victoria and the line will use Canadian drivers and management personnel as he promised earlier.

VCS Leaders Resign

Faced with an unworkable constitution and a $12,000 debt, the majority of the board of directors and board of governors of the Victorian Celebrations Society have resigned.

The mass resignations followed an emergency meeting Wednesday during which 10 of the 13 board members decided it would be better to abandon the society and begin again.

Former society president Helen Beirnes said today the group will meet Monday to shape a new organization to carry out the society's activities which include the annual Christmas lighting contest and the Victorian Days celebrations in May.

The new body will take over responsibility for the society's debt.

Beirnes said a constitution adopted by the society last fall has proved unworkable.

"We've spent four months trying to iron out the problems . . . but the whole thing is too complex, too awkward," she said.

"The majority of us felt we just could not continue."

Beirnes said the society's constitution contained several anomolous features. It created a board of directors with a board of governors in control.

The governors included representatives from the four core municipalities, the Chamber of Commerce, the Visitors Information Centre, armed forces, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Downtown Victoria Association, and four members of the executive of the Celebrations Society.

While it was originally conceived the two boards would be separate, all but two of the directors were also governors, Beirnes said.

The constitution established vague duties and titles, she said. One person was called the chairman of the chairmen, a position that was largely meaningless because the person didn't have power to vote on policies or decisions taken by the governors.

"It was just impossible," said Beirnes. "We'd have a meeting and none of the members would know if they had a vote or not. It got to the point where we could get nothing done."

The group has asked lawyer Alan Emery to draft a new constitution.

Beirnes said the 240 members of the VCS will be invited to join the new society.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Can you tell me where the first public library was established in Cananda? J.B.

A. If you mean public libraries in the modern sense, then the first library service began in Toronto in 1882 following passage of the Public Libraries Act. Prior to that various institutions loaned books in Upper and Lower Canada. Some of these included the Jesuits and British army establishment at Quebec during the 19th and 18th century.

Froth Blown Off Beer Strike Hassle

The final chapter in the late, unlamented beer strike saga has been written with the dropping of breaking and entering and theft charges against Labatt's brewery employees Vic Cervinskas, 24, and Barry Granger, 37.

The two were nabbed last Aug. 22 inside the brewery with an open case of beer beside them during the bitter brewery strike-lockout.

A police spokesman said they had climbed a fence and jimmied a warehouse door. But the men said they were let in the front door by a security guard and decided not to leave as a form of protest against the company for preventing them from working.

They said the beer they were drinking came from their own kits — each employee is entitled to two dozen free beer a month.

Their trial was set for Jan. 29 but they hired a lawyer who convinced the prosecutor the matter would be best forgotten.

Cervinskas says the whole thing was blown out of proportion, nothing more than a tempest . . . in a beer mug.

$50,000 for FitzPatrick

"Can I get fired?" asked Ald. Bill McElroy when Victoria council Thursday approved severance pay for former personnel director Terry FitzPatrick.

FitzPatrick, who was fired last October without any reasons being given, will be paid $50,000.

Council also approved the payment of $1,000 to his lawyer.

FitzPatrick had been earning $30,000 a year as personnel director.

TOWN TALK

Is anybody listening department.

The folks who were still can't believe they heard it but Town Talk says yes indeed, you did.

You did hear that bad taste item from that inane radio announcer.

The item — about city police identifying the body of a man found in local waters — was used to lead off a newscast.

The announcer (does he comprehend anything he reads?) blithely told his listeners that the man, who had been missing for some time, had "turned up the hard way."

Doesn't the station management care?

* * *

Her father, Victoria architect Ben Levinson, said Amy has permission from the club to hold a garage sale at the family home at 2518 Orchard on Saturday.

She and a friend, Lawney Wright, both grade 7 students at Monterey, have been invited to the telethon.

* * *

That was a gutsy move by schools superintendent Allan Stables to tell off the feuding factions on the Greater Victoria school board.

Stables, caught smack in the middle of the interminable debates, arguments and hassles that seem certain to mark the entire term of office of the board, apparently decided enough was enough.

His crisp warning to trustees to smarten up or have decisions made for them by administrators, shows just how bad things are.

* * *

During shooting of the motion picture The Changeling at Royal Roads Military College, the American wardrobe mistress discovered she was short of butlers' uniforms for some scenes.

The lady, under the mistaken assumption that Government House is a theatrical costume store, brashly telephoned the residence of Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving and ordered several butlers' costumes for the next day's shooting.

The request was politely met, with a note explaining that while it was prepared to help the economy anyway it could, Government House was not really in the business of renting costumes.

Train Attached To Tunnel Light

When city council turned Thursday to the gloomy topic of the proposed new central library, Mayor Mike Young urged everyone not to give up hope.

Aldermen were despairing because of an announcement by Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf that the province isn't likely to come through with the $400,000 they said he'd earlier indicated might be available.

Bawlf said $150,000 is more likely the size of the grant to help the library move into a new building on Broughton.

"Isn't there any light at the end of the tunnel?" asked Ald. Bill McElroy.

"There is, but sometimes it gets very dim," replied Young.

"You see a light, then you find out it's a train coming through," said McElroy, who wasn't sharing the mayor's optimism.

Tax Helper? Check First

Beware of anyone knocking on your door and offering to help you file your income tax return, warns Better Business Bureau head Bill Tindall.

He's had reports of at least one individual who's going door-to-door soliciting income tax return work, and he's suspicious.

"Ordinarily, firms don't solicit business like that," he said.

Tindall said residents should ask to see identification and make sure it's identification that can be readily checked.

FOLLOWING the box office success of Animal House, the ABC Network has produced a television parallel in Delta House, again depicting the antics of college students caught up in the extracurricular activities of a fraternity. The series starts at 8 p.m. Saturday on Channel 8, with the regular cast of, from left, Peter Fox, Richard Seer, Wendy Goldman, Jamie Widdoes, Bruce McGill and (on ground) Josh Mostel.

Do Children Get a Share?

In this United Nations Year of the Child, about 100 million new babies will arrive to join the 1½ billion children already here. Soon, there will be more children than adults on earth — already they are the largest minority group, with their rights only feebly defined.

Twenty years ago, the United Nations General Assembly passed the Declaration of the Rights of the Child, pledging itself to the protection of children everywhere. This year, those pledges are up for renewal. Promises to Keep, CBC-TV's contribution to this special year is a documentary evaluation of how well those pledges have been honored. The hour-long special will be seen on at 10 p.m. Monday on channels 2 and 6.

Producer David Gerrard travelled around the world — from Disneyland to refugee camps in Thailand; from Texas to Tanzania — to record on film the joys and terrors of the enchanting world of children.

Although Dr. Benjamin Spock feels that we in North America have produced a new generation of "submissive" parents, far too indulgent with their children, Canada, the U.S. and other developed nations cannot be faulted for failing to honor the UN Declaration's Principle 4 — the right of children to adequate food, housing, medical care and recreation. In third world countries, however, earthquakes, tempests, floods and famine have stood in the way of fulfilling these promises.

While the documentary bears chilling witness to man unkept promises to children around the world, the film is also an exploration of the enormous strength and potential of all children.

The Osmonds In New Series

A sparkling new variety series of true family entertainment involving the whole Osmond clan debuts in the setting of Park City, Utah's Winter Carnival, at 7 p.m. Sunday on channels 4 and 8.

Donny Osmond had to say . . . "We have always wanted to do a family show. Our family is the most important thing in the world to us. We've always performed together, worked together and shared our problems. Now we have a chance to share our particular kind of fun with the viewing audience. Our format allows us to go to some of the world's most exciting locations."

And go to exciting places, they will. Plans are in the works already for shows to be taped in the Houston Astrodome, during a command performance for Queen Elizabeth II and a very special Valentine's show. Plans have also been started for a show to be done from China.

And of course, for the Osmonds, there couldn't have been a better place than Park City Utah to have the first edition of The Osmond Family Show.

Besides being a popular ski resort, Park City is an authentic restored 19th century mining town. "All of us will be there — Merrill, Jay, Alan, Marie, Jimmy, Mother, Father and some of the grandchildren to try our hand at the wild games and contests that the winter carnival is famous for. Can you believe we are going to build the world's largest snowman for the Guinness World Book of Records. That is going to be terrific!" Donny went on to say, ". . . of course we'll be singing and dancing — and the Ice Angels will be back."

Joining the Osmonds for their first show will be the country singer Roy Clark, the U.S. Ski Team and magician David Copperfield.

CLUES ACROSS

1. Hopeless not homeless. While the term "HOPELESS cripple" aptly emphasizes an unfortunate condition, there is comparatively little point in specifying a homeless cripple — as if being crippled wasn't already bad enough in itself.

6. FASTING not basting or tasting. FASTING relates more specifically to "food"; tasting can just as well be associated with drink. Basting is connected with cooking, rather than with "food" as normally understood.

7. PLOTS not blots. Even if a writer uses an old-fashioned pen, it is doubtful if occasional blots are really a matter of "concern" to him.

8. EYES not dyes. You need good EYES for certain jobs, as suggested. On the other hand, it is that certain jobs call for the use of dyes, or suitable dyes, rather than specifically "good dyes."

12. DUPE not dope. The clue suits something done as an end in itself. To DUPE a man can be taken to mean exploiting him in some confidence trick or the like, but simply to dope a man would bring no evident benefit.

14. COLD not colt. Ordinarily, the question of whether a thing is dangerous applies to something which the ordinary person is exposed to, or has to do with. In this way, the common COLD is more apt than a colt.

16. YELL not sell. YELL is the more direct and realistic answer. Objection would be to people causing disturbance, crying things for sale, etc., rather than the actual selling.

19. WEAR not tear. As implied, costlier fabrics are usually understood to WEAR better; one may hardly expect to tear them at all.

23. RASH not rush. In the circumstances, it's a RASH offer that would be high — perhaps absurdly so. In order to answer the clue, a rush offer would need to be RASH.

24. LOSS not lots. "Lead to lots of votes" does not fully express an idea; it should be "lead to lots of votes being gained," say. "LOSS" is more satisfactory in the context given.

25. MILD not wild. Merely being a hopeful type is not enough to cause wild optimism for very little reason.

CLUES DOWN

1. HEAVY not heady. Perfume can be understood to be HEAVY in its nature, or in the excessiveness of its use, but one may doubt if a woman can use acknowledgedly heady perfume (this effect being a personal reaction).

2. LONE not long. The fact of being alone would link up more strongly with the idea of apprehension.

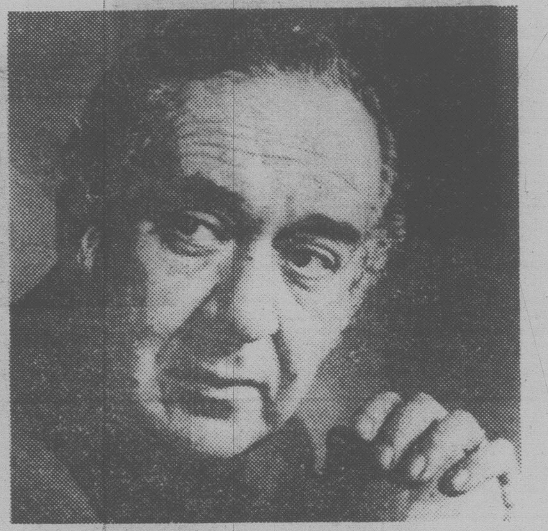
4. WASTEFULLY not tastefully. The taste would be revealed in the choice of colors, etc., rather than in the actual application of the paint which, if too thick, would be WASTEFUL.

9. EMPRESS not express. An express would be the train on which the robbery occurred, rather than the actual entity robbed.

10. FALL not ball. To "carry on" would presumably be after some incident, so FALL is especially apt. The player would limp in his general movements in the field, rather than specifically when running after the ball.

15. WARY not wiry. WARY tactics give something to "think about." Being wiry is simply a matter of physical strength, which is hardly puzzling or perplexing, etc.

COLLEEN ZENK
. . . lovliest of all?



LARRY HAINES
. . . miscast with tan

'World' Saw Colleen's Talent

Soap Opera Scene

By JOHN GAUDAS

There are many beautiful people in soap operas but one of the loveliest of all may just be Colleen Zenk, who plays Barbara Ryan in As the World Turns. She literally has heads turning to look at her.

Colleen has been an actress-in-waiting ever since she was a little girl. Her mother enrolled her in a dance class when she was a tot of 3 and Colleen took quite naturally to the regimen and requirements of show business.

A magazine article about child models prompted Colleen's mother to take Colleen and her younger brother and sister, Chris and Cindy, to Chicago to see if her kids couldn't qualify as models. Mr. Zenk managed to get all three kids jobs and the trio worked for a number of years as child models but only Colleen continued when she became a teenager.

All during her modeling years, Colleen kept up with her dancing, and might have continued except for an accident and resultant surgery on her knee that ended her dream of being a dancer. Fortunately, her high school had an advanced theatre program and Colleen was able to shift gears and concentrate on acting.

Colleen insists she never missed the so-called normal upbringing most kids have.

"I loved the modeling and all the dancing. It was what I wanted to do. My mother never pushed me."

Despite her exceptional beauty, when Colleen landed in New York to pursue an ambition to become established in daytime TV drama, it took 14 screen tests for the various soaps before the producers of As the World Turns recognized her potential and signed her.

Actually, Colleen had first auditioned for the part of a hooker in World, but the producers saw other qualities in her. They had decided the time was right to bring the character of Barbara Ryan, who had been absent from the storyline for about four years, back on the scene, and Colleen was the actress to do it.

CHANNEL CHATTER

Workhorse Larry Haines (he's Stu Bergman in Search for Tomorrow) and Henderson Forsythe (he's Dr. David Stewart in As the World Turns) recently took some time off and actually enjoyed brief vacations. Larry Haines, who recently wound up the Broadway run of Jack Lemmon's starring play, Tribute, went to Florida to relax in the sun. He's back in Search now, and the irony is that Larry's character is supposed to be sick in the hospital, and here he spent that time and money for that healthy tan he acquired in Florida. Hank (as everyone calls Henderson Forsythe) is also currently taking a well-deserved sojourn in the sun. Hank, too, has been doing double duty — on the soap and in the Broadway musical, The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas . . . Larry Bryggman, who is seen as Dr. John Dixon in As the World Turns, can't be idle. He recently finished a film with Al Pacino titled . . . And Justice for All and he is now preparing for the opening of a play, Of the Fields Lately, which may come to Broadway in the spring after a tryout period. Larry is doing all this while continuing as Dr. Dixon in the popular soap . . . Terry Davis (she's April Scott in Edge of night) and Sharon Gabet (she's Raven Alexander Jamison in Edge) are joining forces with actors Tom Nolan and Peter Stelzer in producing, acting and directing in a pair of plays titled Men Without Wimmin written by the prolific Sam Shephard, due to be presented in a New York City showcase. An interesting aspect is that Sharon and Terry get to switch the type of role they play on Edge of Night — Sharon, who is anything but an angel in Edge, gets to be all sweetness and light while Terry, usually the nice one, turns on the villainy . . . Robert Goulet's daughter Nicolette Goulet landed the coveted role of Mary Ryan Fenelli in Ryan's Hope. This marks her first TV role but she has done some stage work. And, yes, Nicolette sings and has performed in nightclubs like her famous dad . . . There's a new syndicated talk-variety series titled Daytime Star which debuts around the country this week. Check the listings to see if it's on in your area. John Gabriel, who is seen as Dr. Seneca Beaulac in Ryan's Hope, is the host of the new monthly series . . . Heather Hill's success story should warm the hearts of supporters of women's lib! Heather is currently serving as one of the directors on two soaps, As the World Turns and Love of Life. Heather worked her way up from the ranks, having started as a production assistant.

PLOT PORTENTS

Just as David tells Stephanie he cares for her, Trish returns to L.A. to hunt for her son Timmy on Days of Our Lives. The on-again-off-again marriage between Marlena and Don is now set for Valentine's Day, and Chris appears bent on marrying Mary soon. Margo tells him to hurry; she may not be around for the occasion.

Peggy Brooks is back from college and wants to work on Dad's paper on The Young and the Restless. Dad has his hands full, fending off Jill and apparently believing her pregnancy line. Kay discovers a crafty opponent in Derek's blackmailing wife, Suzanne. The war is just heating up. As for Vanessa, she's getting in her dirty digs with Lorie, revealing Lance as the father of Leslie's forthcoming child. Brock really believes Nikki can be helped if only she could find her dad.

Gambling is becoming a real problem for Brad in One Life to Live. Pat and Adam discuss children and Sam and Tony get engaged sending Dick into a rage when he hears the news. Vicki makes arrangements to take sodium penothal (truth serum) to be administered by Will Vernon.

Tom is struggling with his blindness and Faith takes pity on him in Ryan's Hope. Jill is in poor condition and things are approaching the danger level for Siobhan.

This is a very heavy week on All My Children, plotwise! Little Charlie hears some disquieting news; Chuck is released from Ray Gardner's clutches with Phil being the hero; and Tara sees the light at last but it just may be too late.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Could you please tell me something about the guy who plays Mork in "Mork And Mindy?" — J. T., Ladysmith.

A. You are referring to the highly talented Robin Williams, considered one of the brightest comedy stars to appear on the entertainment scene in recent years.

He was born in 1951 in Michigan and was an only child. He and his parents moved to Northern California, where he graduated from Redwood High School in Tiburon just north of San Francisco. His high school classmates voted him as the most humorous but also predicted that he would be the least likely to succeed. Were they wrong!

Williams started studying acting in college and subsequently received a scholarship to attend Juilliard in New York, where he studied drama and speech for three years. He returned to San Francisco to have a go at acting. He had little success, however, and turned to comedy.

In 1965, he ventured south to Los Angeles and became involved with The Comedy Store, considered one of the best comedy training grounds. He became a regular at the Store and one night was spotted by producer George Schlatter, who was in the process of putting together a revival of the smash 1960s comedy show, "Laugh-In." Williams was hired as the first regular of the new "Laugh-In" but the reprise failed miserably in the ratings.

Meanwhile, Garry Marshall, producer of "Happy Days," was developing a script about an alien from outer space visiting Milwaukee in the 1950s. Williams was strongly recommended for the lead role and Marshall signed him on. The outer space episode of "Happy Days" attracted so much favorable attention that ABC Network authorized a weekly series that became "Mork and Mindy."

Williams was married last June to Valerie Velardi, a dancer. They live in west Los Angeles. He meditates, does yoga exercises and runs four miles a day. He also is conversant in French, German and Spanish and is currently studying Mandarin Chinese.

Q. No one seems to remember an actress by the name of Jane Frazee from the '30s and '40s. Would you provide some information about her. — G.R.S., Warren, Ohio.

A. There's not much information available on her. Jane Frazee, whose real name was Mary Jane Frazee, went to high school in Duluth, Minn. She was a very versatile performer and won recognition as a stage, nightclub, radio and motion picture star during the 1930s and 1940s. Her movies included "Practically Yours," "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," "Swinging on a Rainbow," "Ten Cents a Dance," "A Guy Could Change," "Calendar Girl" and "Rhythm Inn."

Q. Could you settle an argument between my friend and me. Are Robert Conrad and William Conrad brothers? I say they are not. — S.R., Fremont, Calif.

A. They are not related.

Q. Did CBS cancel "WKRP in Cincinnati?" It hasn't been on recently and I know the show was doing poorly in the ratings. — P.I., St. Thomas, Mo.

A. Although performing poorly in the all-important ratings, "WKRP in Cincinnati" is still alive at CBS. The half-hour comedy series has resumed production and will air at least through the rest of the current season. To give it a better shot at success, CBS moved the program from its 8 p.m. Monday slot to 9:30 p.m. Monday. With the always successful "M-A-S-H" as the lead-in at 9 p.m., "WKRP" should improve in the ratings.

Q. How old is Jimmy McNichol, brother of Kristy McNichol of "Family?" — C.F., Fayetteville, Tenn.

A. He is 17 years old.

Frames, Sprockets

The Victoria Amateur Movie Club is currently producing a six part series on Channel 10 entitled Frames & Sprockets. Each week host Dave Hunter will have as his guest a member of the V.A.M.C. who will show and discuss his or her films.

In addition, five minutes at the end of the show has been set aside for Morris Aldersmith to give basic instruction on amateur film making.

This informative program series starts Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. and will be repeated Thursday at 3 p.m. and again Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

This schedule will continue for six weeks, teaching how to get the most out of a film camera.

IN STARK CONTRAST to the modern highrises of a burgeoning city, a picturesque junk of a time past plies the waters of Hong Kong's harbor in the National Geographic Special Hong Kong: A Family Portrait, Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channel 9.

Parents Learn From Footsteps

Most people undertake the most important job of their lives — parenting — with little or no training. Footsteps, a major new 20-part series, is an attempt to help parents come to grips with the challenges of raising children.

Blending drama and documentaries, Footsteps confronts many of the issues faced by new and prospective parents and explores alternative solutions and coping strategies.

Each 30-minute program in the series, appearing at noon Saturdays on Channel 9, is alternately hosted by two celebrity couples who are themselves parents — Rob Reiner and Penny Marshall, and Mike Farrell and wife Judy.

The foundation of each episode is a 20-minute drama in which a specific problem is dealt with by one of five diverse families: the Sandbergs, white, middle-class working parents with two children; the Marshalls, a black, middle-class family with a working father, a mother at home and two children; the Hornbrenners, a newly-divorced couple with an infant daughter; the Rileys, two rural, working class teen-agers who are expectant parents; and the Sanchezes, an extended family (four adults and a young girl) of Mexican-American heritage.

The dramatic sequences focus on such topics as the need for each child to have an individual identity and sense of belonging; the goal is discipline of nurturing children's responsibility for their own behavior; parents' responsibility to stimulate a child's thinking and learning; the importance of giving children the freedom to express themselves through play, and the necessity of adequate emotional preparation for a child's arrival.

Each drama in the Footsteps series is followed by a five-minute documentary, which reinforces and expands upon the dramatic messages through interviews with learning experts and with children and through actual parent group meetings. All are designed to present specific information and skills, which parents may employ in their own homes.

Footsteps is accompanied by an extensive series of nonbroadcast materials, including viewer guides, discussion guides for leaders of parent and community groups, and curriculum guides for teachers and students in junior and senior high school.

The series, developed with the assistance of several prominent education and communication authorities, was successfully tested in six markets prior to national distribution.

Looking at Stars

But you are wrong, wrong, wrong says production executive Martin Ransohoff if you tag his "Co-Ed Fever" (premiering Feb. 19 on CBS) as another ripoff of "Animal House," which is piling up boxoffice gold at theatres around the country.

" 'Animal House,' only came out last April. I've been developing my concept since the fall of 1976 and delivered it to CBS in 1977."

And the theme? "Steven was one of the first males admitted to Vassar. My mother had gone there. My ex-wife (Steven's mother) and my daughter went to Mt. Holyoke. So I began to wonder what happens when these old gothic women's colleges go co-ed.

"And another thing, I insisted on unknown young actors. I don't want any 35-year-old freshmen. The female lead, Alexa Kanin, is just turning 17. The three young men are 21. One of them, by the way, is Ed Nelson's son, Chris.

CARRADINE

HOLLYWOOD — Old King David had nothing but trouble with his boys, but John Carradine, who recently portrayed the dying giant killer, doesn't have that in common with the man he's playing.

Father of actors David, Keith and Robert Carradine, the patriarch declares, "I have great confidence in them, particularly as actors, because I trained them all!"

John Carradine was seen recently as the fading David in Stories From the Bible, an NBC mini-series.

"The part was limited," he says fretfully, "because the king was dying."

On screen from 1930, Carradine has appeared in numerous screen classics — Tol'able David, Of Human Bondage, The Hurricane, The Hound of Baskervilles, Stagecoach, The Grapes of Wrath and The Ten Commandments.

Name a famous director, and chances are Carradine has worked with him.

Because he has a gift for being peculiarly sinister, he's also starred in such oddities as Munster, Go Home! and The House of Seven Corpses.

He gos from movies to television to movies and says, "I work all the time but mostly abroad."

Proving the agility of his mind, Carradine proudly points out that while he was on recent location with a picture in Vienna he spoke German exclusively; though he'd hardly used the languge in 50 years.

"I was taught German at the Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia when I was six," he explains, "and became fluent.

"But, I hadn't used it in 50 years except for a brief period during the Second World War.

"However, I spoke no English at all while I was in Vienna and got along very well. Members of the company were amazed.

"When I was very young," Carradine continues, "I had an idea that I wanted to be a lawyer, because I'm descended from John Marshall.

"However, since I had no money and was faced with the necessity of making a living, I couldn't go to law school, and I don't regret the fact that I couldn't. For acting has been a very satisfying profession.

"I'm not at all surprised by the talent of my sons.

"He's just back from France where he's been both racing and driving.

"Each is his own man. I told them to do what they wanted to do but only if they were prepared."

"Because," he declares, "everything you learn there you have to forget.

"I told them to use what they need when they learn from someone else and then let go. That's the sensible way to do it.

"I don't belive in so-called method acting. What people call 'method' isn't what Stanislavski meant at all."

A Shakespearean actor before he turned to films, Carradine has played a sweep of roles on stage but admits that there's a limit to the fare in which he's comfortable.

"Acting is acting," he says, "But, while Gielgud (Sir John) has a perfect flair for Restoration comedy, I don't.

"My favorite play is A Man For All Seasons and my favorite part Othello.

"I know many actors prefer Iago, and I've played him, but Othello calls for such a tremendous range of emotion.

"I played Hamlet for the first time when I was 38 and for the last time when I was 54.

"I'm too old now for Hamlet and, in fact, for most of Shakespeare; though I could still play Skylock.

Songwriter Says 'Rats' to His Latest Musical

Cliff Jones is a talented songwriter with two hit musicals to his credit. He also happens to have a firm grounding in psychology and before he opted for a career in show business he was studying for his doctorate.

His academic career may not have played any importance when he wrote the hit musicals Hamlet and Hey Marilyn, but his study of the actions of rats in the lab has been turned to good advantage in his latest work.

Some of My Best Rats Are Friends will be broadcast on CBC Radio's The Entertainers, Sun. Jan. 28 at 4:05 p.m. It will also be heard on Festival Theatre, Mon. Jan. 29 at 9:04 p.m. on CBC Stereo. A co-production of CBC Radio Variety and Drama, it is produced by Paul Mills and directed by John Douglas.

Rats is the hilarious story of Fred (played by Martin Short of Second City revue fame) a graduate student determined to get his MA in psychology. Battling a hostile academic establishment, sabotage in the laboratory, sexual diversions, and a very un-understanding wife, he finds the real human beings in his life are the rats in his lab cages.

They talk to him, joke with him, sing, dance and become his best friends. Then he discovers a rat is only a rat but a degree is solid gold. The conflict between his ambitions and his loyalties create the tensions of the first rodent musical!

Nancy White, the satiric songstress of CBC Radio's Sunday Morning, is the voice of one rat, (Nancy played Ophelia in the CBC Radio version of Cliff Jones' Hamlet) Other rats are played by Pat Rose, Suzette Couture, and John Kastner.

Dawn Greenhalgh, who appears regularly on Sussex Drive, plays the head of the psychology department. Henry Ramer and Colin Fox play other professors.

Amenity-Packed Split Level

Here's a contemporary three bedroom design which offers a number of amenities establishing a tone of luxury and open-air spaciousness. The rustic exterior impression is in keeping with the almost rural openness of the indoor areas.

Four risers lead up from the sunken entrance foyer to the large L-shape living-dining room combination. The living room has a charming bow window and resultant window seat, and the dining area leads onto the rear sundeck via optional sliding glass doors.

The large family room down three risers from the nook, connects to the rear patio and has a corner stone fireplace with the built-in barbecue grill feature on the patio side.

A downstairs vanity bath, a laundry-utility room and a workshop to the rear of the two-car garage, completes the amenities built into this design.

A partial basement under the kitchen and living-dining area, and the unfinished room on the main floor, allow abundant space for future expansion. This latter area, for example, could be developed into a den or office space for the professionally-oriented family.

Plans for design No. 70-1239 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eightset package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $4 for postage and handling, and add 7% for sales tax.

Send for current edition of Select Home Designs magazine, Series 38, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 350 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50¢ postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Press, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5Y 1R2.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Mrs. G. Harris of Scarborough says she is fascinated by Tiffany lamps and would love to collect them if she could only afford it.

I am not sure if Mrs. Harris is fully aware of just how opulent her tastes are. A $100,000 lottery win would hardly buy you a membership and even with a million you would have to proceed with caution. There is almost no such thing as an authentic Tiffany lamp going for less than $1,000. $5,000 is more like the average and $25,000 by no means unheard of.

What Mrs. Harris may have had in mind when she referred to Tiffany lamps were the relatively common lamps made in the Tiffany style — just as all facial tissues tend to be referred to as Kleenex (to the chargrin of their competitors). Authentic Tiffanys were too expensive for most people even when new but fortunately there were other manufacturers who made fine products at more democratic prices.

They should not be regarded as imitations. The lamps they made were not mock-Tiffany but authentic art nouveau — that turn-of-the-century fad which marked art's last fliration with the beautiful. Art nouveau was unashamedly luscious, deriving not just from plant forms but the most exotic of plants. The inspiration was tropical and often referred to as 'decadent' — as though any flowers with aspirations beyond those of the forgetmenot were somehow overdoing it. There is no doubt that art nouveau over did it and nothing even remotely exciting has happened since.

Lamps are always difficult to identify with any precision. This applies even more to the older oil lamps whose shades, funnels, standards, burners and wicks might easily have originated with a series of different manufacturers and each part, as it became damaged in normal wear and tear, might have been replaced until there was no part of the original lamp left and it becomes rather like the man who said 'this is a very good axe — I've owned it for twenty years — it has only had three new heads and five new handles'.

Most art nouveau lamps can be traced to at least two manufacturers — the metal ware, often Bradley and Hubbard, and the shades, which command most of the interest. The Charles Parker Company offered 'lead art glass overlaid shades' and decadence was more than hinted at in the names they used for the finishes — Pompeian, Babylonian, Persian, Assyrian, Nubian, Byzantine. P.J. Handel was famous for his 'pond lily' lamp with the shade chipped on the outside and painted with brilliant designs on the inside.

Connecticut was a great centre for art nouveau lamps. A number of companies working out of Meriden competed hotly for this very fancy market. Miller Bros. and Carl Helmschied produced leaded art glass and bent glass shades but others in Hartford, Mount Vernon and Chicago were also doing important work.

The subject is vast and good for a lifetime of study. Unlike spatterware which we were talking about last week, art nouveau lamps were always prize possessions and therefore carefully looked after. Even when fashions changed they would tend to be crated safely and stored in the attic — who could bring themselves to throw away something that lovely? It would be sacrilege. All art nouveau lamps are pricey, but not necessarily on the Tiffany scale. These are not objects which one collects by the dozen — just to own one is joy enough.

Beware of reproductions, I beg you. Buy only from dealers of unimpeachable virtue and insist on a certificate of authentication.

Looking at Stars

When Leslie Uggams touched base in Manhattan recently, she was raptuous about her role in the NBC limited series, "Backstairs at the White House" running successive Mondays for four weeks starting Jan. 29.

The songbird-turned-actress said she thought that drawing the Kizzy role in "Roots" (which got her into Emmy Award territory) was the first and last acting superplum she'd ever land.

Now she's toned her personal sparkle down to play the seamstress-maid who first entered the White House when William Howard Taft was president and retired during the Eisenhower regime to write the autobiography on which this mini-series is based.

Interestingly, Robert Vaughan, who once said he feels he resembles Franklin D. Roosevelt, and who developed a stage show with himself as FDR, plays the World War I president, Woodrow Wilson.

It's John Anderson who drew a change of pace. He was seen on TV as Harry Truman. In "Backstairs," Flanders portrays Warren Harding. Harry Morgan (M*A*S*H) does Truman.

If I should die, think only this of me: / That there's some corner of a foreign field / That is forever England . . .
— Rupert Brooke

Anyone who passed through the Canadian school system in the last 60 years could hardly have missed these famous words: "If I should die, think only this of me: / That there's some corner of a foreign field / That is forever England . . ."

In my day we had to memorize them, along with the rest of the sonnet which they begin. It is, of course, Rupert Brooke's The Soldier, symbol of everything that was wrong-headed about going to war, or so we believed then. Brooke's patriotism, romanticism and idealism seemed almost laughable when set against the brutal realism of, say, Wilfrid Owen. ("Bent double, like old beggars under sacks, / Knock-kneed, coughing like hags, we cursed through sludge . . .").

What made Brooke's idealism possible was his early death at 27 in 1915. He died of septicaemia en route to Gallipoli, victim of a gnat bite and untempered by battle.

The irony escaped the British public, which made him an instant hero; his obituary was written for The Times by First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill. Since then Brooke's literary fortunes have fluctuated with the prevailing attitudes to romanticism and war until today, in Rupert Brooke in Canada, editors Sandra Martin and Roger Hall can safely pronounce his work "if not superb, at least distinguished."

This, then, was the young man who sauntered through Canada in 1913 on assignment for the English weekly Westminster Gazette. Rupert Brooke in Canada "reprints Brooke's original travel articles concerning Canada, along with selected passages from his Canadian correspondence."

Also included are biographical notes, one or two of Brooke's poems and numerous photographs which help to set the scene. Despite its publishers' suggestion that Rupert Brooke in Canada provides a "vivid, perceptive and candid portrait of Canada in those innocent, faraway days before the First World War," the main interest of the book lies in the personality of Brooke himself.

Editors Martin and Hall do not appear to like him much. "By the time he reached the Rockies some of his ultra-Englishness had drained from him," they say. "He was now seeing Canada for what it was and avoiding simple comparisons." And again, in their final summing-up: "Brooke missed the essential truth about . . . Canada . . . (his) England, his Cambridge . . . were smug middle-class havens, insulated . . . (He did not realize) that what Canada and the U.S. had to offer was more valuable than ten thousand soulful Georgian poets. The new world offered hope and opportunity and a chance to make good . . . Canada . . . didn't need a past; it had a future."

For his part, Brooke thrilled to the land ("Lake Louise is the most beautiful place in the world") but was ultimately disgusted at the rampant materialism of its inhabitants: "A most horribly individualistic place, with no one thinking of anything except the amount of money they can make, by any means, in the shortest time." This judgment, backed up by frequent observations, makes Martin and Hall's phrase, "hope, opportunity and a chance to make good" sound a trifle "smug, middle-class" and "insulated" itself.

Perhaps they were also piqued at Brooke's racial snobbery, which though clearly in evidence ("There is the difficulty of distinguishing your village from the others. It would be as bad as being married to a Jap") was mild in comparison to the outright bigotry so prevalent in Canada at the time. (An editorial in a 1906 Saturday Night pontificated thus: "We don't want Chinamen in Canada . . . The slant-eyed Asiatic, with his yellow skin, his unmanly humility, his cheap wants, would destroy the whole equilibrium of industry . . . We cannot assimilate them. They are an honest, industrious, but hopelessly inferior race.)

Rupert Brooke may have been snobbish, ultra-English, overly romantic and politically naive. He was also intelligent, witty, perceptive and open-minded enough to appreciate the prairie, something most first-comers are too blinkered to be able to do. His observations are worth reading, partly because they tell us something about ourselves, but primarily because he made them.

Romantic idealism is rather a pleasure to meet, when one can find it. Recently I inherited a marble cross which an uncle sent home to his mother during the First World War. He'd carved it himself, at 19, from a fragment of the altar of the bombed-out Cathedral of Ypres. By the time the War ended, he came home with a profound distrust of all church men except the Salvation Army, and a determination never to bring children into such a cruel and unjust world.

He survived. Rupert Brooke did not. Perhaps Brooke, who was able to die with his ideals intact, was the luckier one.

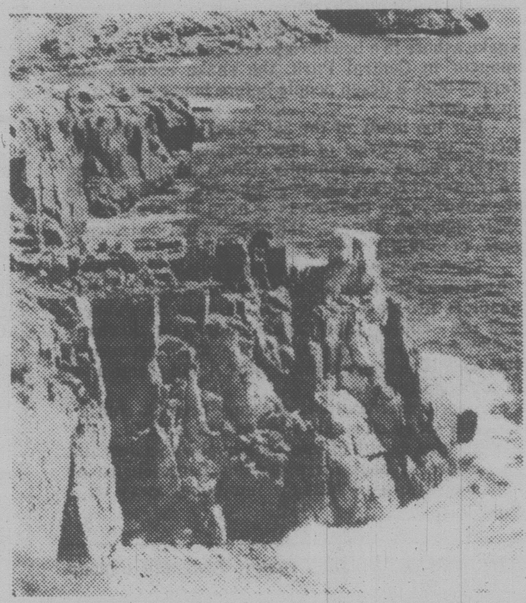
Prose from Bowering Hardly a Flowering

By DOUG BEARDSLEY



CAPE BRETON: Hardy flesh on transported bones

Two dissimilar works here — one poetry, one prose; one from the East, one from the West — united by the fact that they are both ours, both Canadian.

Cleaning The Bones, Joseph McLeod's first book of poems, combines poetry with family photographs in an exploration of his Cape Breton crofter roots, and it should be of interest to anyone who is concerned with seeing our Canadian past as if for the first time not only as it was but as it is today.

For McLeod, these sparse, clear pieces are a kind of "cleaning out of the past." Their tone is one of soft understatement and several of the poems, most notably "The Waiting Into Covering," "The Rail Fence," "Aunt Minnie's Hook" and the two portraits entitled "Dan" and "Archie" are of a high standard, marred only by the occasional sentimentality and flat statement.

Overall, I remain uncertain about the quality of the poems, but in the case of Cleaning The Bones this may not matter. Some things are beyond poetry and, in transporting us from the Isle of Sky to Cape Breton, McLeod offers a glimpse of the hardships that confronted the ancestors and how they survived.

George Bowering's book, Concentric Circles, was written in the 1960s, but his publisher's claim that it is the author's "first major piece of fiction" is absurd. On the contrary, this is a very "minor" piece of work, fiction or otherwise.

Competent prose, like competent poetry, is simply not good enough nowadays, when the Canadian reader is faced with a barrage of books from which to choose, many of them of excellent quality.

Briefly, the main characters in Bowering's book are Mel, a not-so-mad bomber; Brown, a not-so-mad painter (guess what his favourite color is?); Janice, Mel's girl-friend, and a government minister-secret agent. Brown and Mel act like the leading characters in Waiting For Godot cast in an urban setting, but without Beckett's brilliant dialogue. Indeed, Bowering's dialogue is a curious mixture of academic pretentiousness and beer-parlor adolescence. There are a few good comic moments but these fall far-between.

Bowering the poet has given us many fine poems, but his prose, and particularly his habit of publishing early "minor" work in whatever genre, does him a disservice. Books such as Concentric Circles may be of some interest of prospective academics and PhD students who require a writer's complete works but they hold little interest for even the most voracious readers of Canadian literature.

New Conrad Book Has Scholarly Beat

By ALEK de MARCH

Posthumous publication of work by a great writer is always a special event, especially if the book includes writings not previously available to the general public. This certainly has been the case with Congo Diary And Other Uncollected Pieces, by Joseph Conrad.

But those who remember that he died 55 years ago may question whether anything that was written by Conrad and took so long to reach the general public is worth reading.

Slim Volume

The question is answered in the introduction to the slim volume by its editor, Zdzislaw Najder, who says, "Although none of these uncollected and unpublished pieces represent a major achievement, and several of them are quite trivial, all are of considerable interest to any Conrad scholar or admirer."

Najder is right, with some exceptions.

Congo Diary is made up of 22 pieces varying in length from a few paragraphs to 34 pages. The title for the book comes from a diary, or rather a very short journal Conrad kept during his stay in The Congo in 1890. Also in the collection are seven chapters from the unfinished novel, The Sisters; a novella, The Nature of Crime, written in collaboration with Ford Madox Ford; along with shorter essays, letters, a cable and several forewords and prefaces.

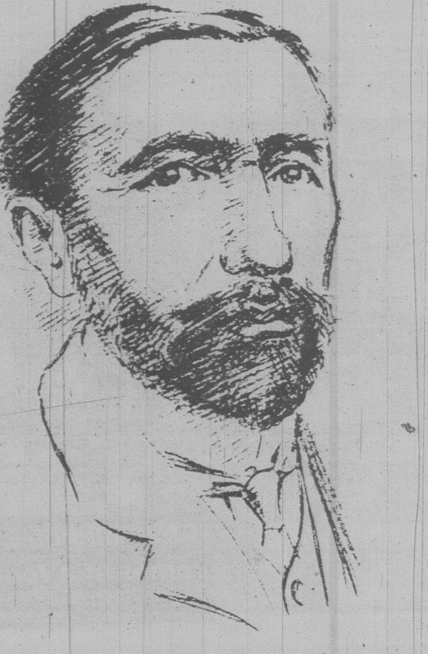
Najder tell us "the Congo notes constitute one of Conrad's earliest writings in English and reflects, if not his command of the language, then at least his characteristic difficulties with it."

Najder also says the notes in the diary, believed to be the only diary Conrad ever kept, provided some raw material for the author's masterpiece, Heart of Darkness.

One entry reads: "Saw another dead body lying by the path in an attitude of meditative repose.

"In the evening three women of whom one albino passed our camp. Horrid chalky white with pink blotches. Red eyes. Red hair. Features very Negroid and ugly. Mosquitos. At night when the moon rose heard shouts and drumming in distant villages. Passed a bad night."



"I believe that he was incomparably the greatest artist who ever wrote a novel," H. L. Mencken wrote.

Although it was quite common for Conrad to begin a novel or a short story and lay it aside for months or even years, The Sisters was the only work he never picked up again. The story in the finished seven chapters is about a lonely, tormented Ukrainian painter living in exile in Paris, and his neighbors, a strange Basque family.

Najder sums up The Sisters as "an artistic failure" but "a fascinating piece. The fragment presents dramatic evidence of Conrad's search for his own place in life and his own line in literature."

The Nature of Crime, the longest story in the book (34 pages) and written in collaboration with Ford Madox Ford, is entirely out of place in this collection.

Most Conrad scholars agree that his contribution to The Nature of Crime amounted to little more than one short passage. Najder says the collaboration had "the character of friendly assistance and not of serious literary co-production. Conrad appears to have been antipathetic to the project and had to be cajoled to add anything to the text."

The reprinting of Conrad's comments on Marcel Proust is of more value and interest, especially since the note on Proust is Conrad's only major comment on a 20th-century writer.

Proust as Creator was published in 1923, and in it Conrad hailed Proust as a writer who has pushed analysis to the point where it becomes creative. "I don't think there ever has been in the whole of literature such an example of the power of analysis," Conrad said, "and I feel pretty safe in saying that there will never be another."

Joseph Conrad published 11 novels, besides two in collaboration with Ford. He also published five volumes of novelettes, an autobiography (Personal Record) and a number of odd pieces reprinted from magazines. Many of Conrad's books and short stories are masterpieces of modern literature.

Died in 1924

When Conrad died in 1924, H. L. Mencken said, ". . . there was something almost suggesting the vastness of a natural phenomenon. He transcended all the rules. There have been, perhaps, greater novelists, but I believe that he was incomparably the greatest artist who ever wrote a novel."

It is regrettable that this new volume bearing Joseph Conrad's name reveals so little of the author's genius.

Another Smasher From Jack Higgins

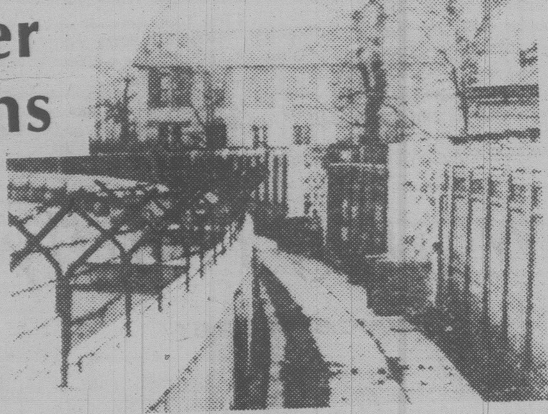
By FRED BARNES

Jack Higgins and Alistair MacLean are superb storytellers, perhaps the two best active today. But in this reviewer's judgment, it is not fair to link them together since Higgins is much the better novelist. MacLean has no novels to match the two most recent works by Higgins — The Eagle Has Landed and Storm Warning —nor his latest, Day of Judgment.

Higgins again shows his remarkable ability to blend his fictional stories into the warp and woof of history — this time Walter Ulbricht, President Kennedy and Pope John walk in realistic fashion through the pages as the author moves his milieu from wartime Germany and Britain to East and West Germany just after the Berlin Wall has drawn the undivided attention of all. Kennedy is about to come to Berlin and declare: Freedom has many difficulties and democracy is not perfect, but we never had to put up a wall to keep our people in.

Ulbricht is not looking forward to the visit, and demands a countermove to discredit the president.

That opportunity arises when Father Sean Conlin, an Irish priest and head of the League of Resurrection that has spirited thousands of East Germans through the infamous wall, is trapped in East Germany. Conlin, who survived Dachau to become an outspoken opponent of communism, is world famous and the intent is to have him confess to being an agent of the Americans working to discredit East Germany. Kennedy is due in a few weeks, so Harry van Buren, a former American and a brain-washing expert, doesn't have much time. Van Buren's father was caught in the McCarthy witch-hunt and committed suicide, Harry enlisting in the Marines for Korea service, presumably to show his personal patriotism. Captured by the Chinese he is subjected to propaganda and mind alteration, but his own psychology background eventually gets him into the extensive Chinese program, and then into East Germany for research. He is happy there because he is permitted to carry on the type of work that would never be tolerated in the U.S.



Gripping trip behind the Berlin Wall

Kennedy and Pope John are only two of many setting wheels in motion when word leaks out that Conlin has been caught. An obvious choice to head up the operation is Major Simon Vaughan, an English officer who was so cold and ruthless during his service in Borneo that he became known as the Beast of Selangor. Driven from the army in disgrace, Vaughan now makes a lucrative living smuggling East Germans to safety at high prices. In Vaughan, Higgins has developed a remarkable character. His cast of aides are brilliantly drawn, too — a Jewish undertaker, an ex-Luftwaffe ace, an ex-SS man, six Lutheran monks, and an American Jesuit. As usual Higgins also provides a tender love story, while mercifully sparing us the rampant sex that so many novelists today believe is a must for success.

It's a smashing yarn as you follow Vaughan and his ill-assorted group into rural East Germany. Make the trip by all means. I promise you won't be disappointed.

BUT PADDED WITH HYSTERIA

By PAUL BENNETT

But in view of recent world events it is all too easy to remember that truth is stranger than fiction after reading The Snake, by New Jersey author John Godey.

Godey is author of a series of thrillers, the best-known of which is The Taking of Pelham 1-2-3, a made-into-movie work about the takeover of a New York subway train by a group of black activists.

Here, he has strung the makings of a first-class short story into a full-length novel by padding it with none-too-believable hysteria scenes.

A sailor brings a deadly 12-foot black mamba snake ashore in a box in New York, is murdered by a mugger in Central Park, the snake escapes and fatally bites a dozen people before being killed by a mass crowd.

Far too many of the 251 pages are devoted by Godey to scenarios of how the snake-on-the-loose affects people's equanimity. Given the phlegmatic character of New Yorkers — who daily face death in the subways, on the streets or even in the safety of their high-rise offices — the mass hysteria stretches one's credibility.

There are several mob scenes outside New York City Hall as the aroused public demands action, two chapters are devoted to spin-off hysteria themes, and the subject arises again and again. Perhaps Godey has a soft spot for movie extras, because if this book is ever made into a film, it will create a lot of job opportunities.

Aside from that, there are some credible characters and scary moments scattered through the tale, along with a wealth of information about snakes and snake lore. A book for a budding herpetologist or someone who likes idling a few hours away on a thriller.

Many Fresh Insights into Jewish History Offer Little Hope for Shuttle Diplomacy

If President Jimmy Carter ever reads Wanderings, Chaim Potok's history of the Jews, he may well decide to wash his hands of the Middle East business, for here, in a mere half-page (page 253), Potok sets out the root cause why Arab and Jew can never agree to peaceful co-existence. Peace and economic security are minor considerations in a region that, for mellenia, has known neither. Religion is the sole issue, and religion and common-sense have little or nothing in common.

Jewry traces its beginnings to Abraham, who lived years ago in Ur, the most important of the river civilizations that mysteriously sprang up along the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates in Mesopotamia.

Abraham's Family

For some reason, Abraham and his family left the city of Ur and he began his wanderings in what is known as the Fertile Crescent. At a place called Haran the pagan wanderer received a command and a promise from God: he was told to continue wandering until his destination was made known to him; and he was told that he would father a great nation. In due course, he would found the Jewish nation in Palestine.

Thousands of years later, in the 7th century AD, Mohammed received his call from God. After vainly trying to persuade the Jews to follow him, he broke with them, directed his prayers from Jerusalem to Mecca, claimed that Islam was the true continuation of the religion of Abraham; and that both Jews and Christians had corrupted the original truth revealed to Abraham by Allah.

Abraham was now claimed as the father of both faiths. That was in 624 AD — and the situation hasn't altered. Complicating the issue is the city of Jerusalem, site of the first Jewish Temple and resting place of Mohammed prior to a visit he paid to heaven — which makes it, after Mecca and Medina, the third holiest place in Islam. No modern shuttle diplomacy can compete with beliefs of this kind.

Potok doesn't make remarks like that. He simply provides us with a masterly distillation of the long history of the Jews and allows us to draw our own conclusions. Of course, scholarly works on the subject abound, and Potok actually lists some 240 of these in a selected bibliography. No, Wanderings is not original, but it is unique.

This is the first time, to my knowledge, that a history of the Jews has been compiled in such a way that it can be read easily and avidly by non-Jews. The reason for its verve and lucidity is that Potok, in addition to being a rabbi and a Talmudic scholar of some standing, is also a successful novelist, and it is the novelist's touch which has blended meticulous scholarship with dramatic excitement to form a magnificent story and a great achievement.

Wanderings will not only substantially increase anyone's understanding of ancient history, it will also make clearer how the Old Testament reflects various epochs; how the writing was influenced, even dictated, by Persian, Grecian and Roman rule. Clearly, without a comprehensive knowledge of the effects of the influence of alien rulers, the Old Testament cannot be adequately interpreted.

But this book is chiefly notable for its aliveness with the sweep and turbulence of the centuries, from the remote past to the present day, showing us the Jewish people within a succession of civilizations that both harbored and oppressed them — Egypt and Mesopotamia, Greece and Rome, Islam, medieval Christendom, modern secular society — exploiting, tormenting, and slaughtering the Jews whilst paradoxically helping to create their unique and ineffaceable identity.

The book's resonance and depth is enhanced by the author's revelation of the complexity and richness of this Jewish identity by showing the essential nature of each of the great cultures with which Jewish life and intellect have been intertwined. This is historical synthesis at its best.

The lively text, aided by illustrations on almost every page, sweeps the reader along through descriptions of great events and great men: kings, judges, patriarchs, prophets, and warriors . . . Moses, Saul, Ezekiel, Jewish scholars, philosophers, poets and physicians in eighth century Muslim Spain . . . rabbis and merchants of Europe's dark ages . . . the Inquisition, the plagues and persecutions with whole peoples in motion across continents . . . the happy moments of the Enlightenment, and later the massive exodus from Europe to America (there are more Jews in the U.S. today than in Israel and the whole of western Europe combined), and finally to our own time with its death camps and the triumph of nationhood in Israel, where it all began.

And along the way we are held fascinated by a multiplicity of fresh insights into such things as the Crusades, ghettoization, and the advent of Christianity from a Jewish perspective, with Jesus as Joshua "the apocalyptic Pharisee" suffering the normal fate of self-proclaimed messiahs who upset the establishment in Judea, an insignificant appendage of the Roman Empire, a mere sliver of land attached to the great province of Syria.

Divergent Societies

Many readers will enjoy the exploration of such subtleties as the shaping of two divergent Jewish societies: the worldly Sephardim, touched by the warmth and color of Arabic Spain, before being shattered and dispersed; and the wretched, shockingly persecuted Ashkenazim, who were driven into the primitive borderlands of central Europe and Russia.

All readers will be caught up in the occasional immediacy of Potok's story, such as when he describes the Essene scribes hurrying to complete their important work and just managing to hide it before an avenging Roman legion arrives. What they concealed so effectively are today known as the Dead Sea Scrolls.

And as readers warm to the infinite variety of Jewish life; sympathize with the Jewish fate in many eras and places; and better understand the reasons for the "otherness" of Jews in non-Jewish societies, they will perhaps join those who have bridled at the stinging lines of W. N. Ewer:

How odd
of God
To choose
The Jews.

And as they gain from this book a vision of the oneness of Jewish history they will be inclined to applaud the crushing reply delivered, I believe, by Aldous Huxley:

But odder still
For those who choose
A Jewish god
To spurn the Jews.

This great summarization of Jewish history deserves a wide readership, and I hate to introduce even one sour note after expressing such enthusiasm, but I must warn potential buyers to examine the binding carefully before purchasing. My gently-handled, and only once read copy has come adrift from its spinal moorings and shows signs of falling to pieces, page by page.

* * *

A characteristic of Jews throughout the ages has been a desire to cease wandering and assimilate with, and be accepted by, the country of their birth or adoption. A reflection of this desire, and a testimony to Jewish success as well as the climate of tolerance that exists in Canada, is to be found in Pioneers, Pedlars, and Prayer Shawls, an account of the Jewish communities in British Columbia and the Yukon.

The book is a rag-bag collection of thumbnail sketches of well-known personalities, obscure people, organizations, cemeteries, small businesses — and even a May Queen. The common denominator is that all are Jewish.

Unlike Wanderings, which has universal appeal, this book's appeal is limited, I would think, to Jewish people in B.C. and the Yukon who will no doubt appreciate these illustrated potted histories, as well as the preface and commentaries written by the compiler, amateur historian Cyril Edel Leonoff, archivist of the Jewish Historical Society of British Columbia.

Literary Coup Lampoons Land of the Free

UPDIKE . . . ironic wit

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Although Colonel Felix Hakim Ellellou — self-righteous dictator, religious fanatic, paranoiac and murderer — is hardly a "hero" one would expect to empathize with, the surprise of The Coup is that the reader does just that. How author John Updike manages to generate that response is not entirely a mystery, for he creates for Ellellou a past, present and future composed of a myriad details and implications that leave no doubt that here, blood and all, is a man.

A man, that is, with a dream.

Ellellou, president for life of a sub-Saharan country called Kush, envisions his barren, drought-stricken land (whose flag is a lush, green field) as a garden of plenty where free men — blacks, that is — can live without the yoke of white imperialism around their necks. The French have come and gone, the Americans are impatient to move in, the Russians already have an underground missile base in the desert, tolerated only as a preventive threat.

Nothing ever gets done in Kush — nothing, that is, of a positive nature. Ellellou can only strike blindly at imagined enemies in his efforts to clear the land. And while he is wasting his energy doing that, his real enemies manage to creep in unnoticed and establish themselves as the rulers of Kush. Ellellou is reduced to pensioned beggary in France, where he "is rumored to be working on his memoirs."

And here they are in The Coup.

Because it's entirely Colonel Ellellou's own story, told in both the first and third person, The Coup offers us an African look at an African reality that non-fiction works on the subject come nowhere close to rendering.

And because it is Ellellou's own story, told by a man equipped with sharp eyes and an American education (obtained after his flight from Africa after deserting from the Algerian war), the text offers many trenchant observations on the land of the free — or, in Ellellou's words, "that fountainhead of obscenity and glut."

Updike himself, of course, has always been a keen and subtle critic of American life, but his use of Ellelou here allows his ironic wit greater play. Thus The Coup is often quite simply funny and, sometimes hilarious,

And when Ellellou offers us his contemporary sententious pseudo-Marxist rage at the do-gooding America overseas, the results strike ridiculously true. Here's Klipspringer, a deputy secretary of state, explaining the foundations of American belief and policy to Ellellou's principal rival:

"A nation hates America because its racial balance and political persuasion, love America because . . . America is downright lovable. America loves all peoples and wants them to be happy, because America loves happiness."

Updike's tenency to wax overly poetic in other books, though sometimes present even here, is usually turned to advantage in The Coup: it becomes another aspect of Colonel Ellellou as, for instance, he makes love to one of his four wives, or embarks on one of the journeys he is always, guiltily, making into the starving countryside of Kush.

Often amusing, these flights of the Colonel, yet terribly revealing too. Again the man emerges and finds a place in our hearts. And, though we may not want him there or feel very comfortable with his presence, we suspect he will remain for some time.

The Coup, by John Updike. Random House. $11.75.
